Rumania Asks German Help as Troops Clash With Soviet Invaders

Scores Are Killed As Citizens Fight Russian Entrance Into Ceded Town

By the Associated Press

Bucharest (Saturday), June 29.—Embattled Rumanian citizens fought Red army troops for hours today in the border town of Cernauti as the Russian army of occupation swept into ceded parts of Rumania and moved beyond those areas into old Rumania itself.

Scores of civilians were killed and wounded.

The fighting at Cernauti started between Communists and anti-Communists hours before the troops arrived in midafternoon and sent tanks against barricades thrown up in the streets.

After being driven from the streets, the anti-Communists took to housetops and sniped at the vanguard of the Russian army marching in to take over territory the Bucharest government handed over in response to Moscow demands.

From before dawn until Russian infantry marched in at 2 p. m. the snipers blazed away. They finally were killed or dispersed.

Rumanian Troops Resist

Many Russians were killed at an undisclosed point on the Bessarabian frontier when Rumanian forces opened up machine gun fire on the Red forces which continued on past the limits of ceded Bessarabia and Bucovina into old Rumania.

[The official Moscow communique reporting the occupation mentioned no fighting. On the contrary, the Soviet radio said Russian troops "were pelted with flowers, and smothered with hugs and kisses and greeted as liberators by residents of Bucovina and Bessarabia." The radio added that Rumanian flags "already had been ripped down by the overjoyed population."]

King Carol ordered complete mobilization—"to the last man"—effective at midnight, and all taxis and private vehicles here disappeared from the streets during the early morning hours.

Cafes closed as waiters hastily doffed their aprons and hurried to concentration points to join the 2,000,000 men already under arms in this war-threatened Balkan kingdom.

It was learned that the German legation warned the Rumanian government to increase internal police measures against possible "revolutionary activity by Communists and Jews."

Trouble From Hungary

A complicated situation fell on the Rumanian general staff with the revelation that many of Rumania's troops on the Hungarian frontier—another trouble spot—are from ceded Bessarabia.

According to the Russian demands to which King Carol capitulated, they must return to their Bessarabian homes as new Russian citizens.

Besides losing some of its best fighters, the general staff must find replacements quickly on the Hungarian frontier, which threatens to develop trouble over Hungary's demands for Transylvania, territory lost to Rumania after the World War.

After taking over Cernauti, a city of 110,000 population, the Russians swept into Dorohoi, a town in the province of Moldavia.

As soon as news of the spread of Rumanian occupation seeped out, the Rumanian government filed an urgent appeal with the German minister that Berlin put hard pres-

RUSSIAN ARMIES march into ceded Rumanian territory, thrust past the limits of Soviet agreement with Bucharest, and, Rumanians report, clash at one point with Rumanian troops.

AT CERNAUTI, Bessarabia, Communists and anti-Communists clash before and during the occupation and scores are killed. General mobilization is ordered by Carol.

HUNGARY orders her armies to the frontier, ready to move into Transylvania if the Russians push further into Rumania. Germany watches the move intently. Some observers envision Moscow-Berlin break if Russia seizes the mouth of the Danube.

BULGARIAN SOURCES say Germany will act if the Red army seizes further territory.

IN THE WEST Britain suffers her heaviest air raid casualties. Shortly after London announces demilitarization of the Channel Islands of Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney and Sark. German bombers attack them. Twenty-nine are reported killed and many wounded Page 5.

Hungarian Army, At Border, Awaits Signal From Nazis To Open Attack

By the Associated Press

Budapest, June 28.—Hungary sent her troops marching clear to the Rumanian frontier tonight and official quarters said they would continue across the border, with the full support of Germany and Italy if the Russian army of occupation continued moving toward the Carpathian Mountains.

Officials here admitted the continuing Russian advance into old Rumania after occupying ceded Bessarabia and Northern Bucovina would change entirely Hungary's attitude heretofore of watchful waiting.

They said Germany, although desirous of keeping Hungary out of war, would certainly give Hungary the go-ahead signal "with full Axis support" if the Russians failed to apply the brakes.

Up to Moscow

The entire question of peace or war in Southeastern Europe appeared to hang on how far Russia goes into Rumania.

An open break between Moscow and Berlin seemed a growing possibility over the Rumanian issue.

Hungarian troops were "ordered to advance," the official news agency said, explaining that this meant chausseur troops had been sent up to the line on the Rumanian frontier.

The inspired press expressed concern tonight over the welfare of the 1,500,000 Hungarians in Transylvania.

"Don't they need protection?" the papers asked.

Simultaneously War Minister Karoly Bartha called upon Hungarians quickly to provide funds for Red Cross hospital trains, ambulances and medical supplies. He said pointedly:

"I trust you will understand what this appeal is all about."

Rumania got the high plateau of Transylvania from Austria-Hungary during the World War. It is Rumania's largest province, geographically—24,020 square miles, and its second in population, about 3,500,000.

Fear for Minorities

Now that Russia has taken back Rumanian Bessarabia and North Bucovina, nearly every Magyar is talking about the return of Transylvania.

The newspapers put it this way:

"Nobody can tell whether the Rumanian troops, fleeing from the Russians, will not turn on unprotected peoples; that is, minorities."

Rumania has sent almost 2,000,000 troops into Transylvania.

Bulgars Count on Berlin

By the Associated Press

Sofia, Bulgaria (Saturday), June 29.—The newspaper Outro declared today that Germany would "act" if the Russian army of occupation in Rumania goes beyond the Pruth River, on the southwestern edge of ceded Bessarabia.

The newspaper, known as a German mouthpiece, said "it is the desire of Germany" that no further changes take place in the Balkans. It added that the Nazis would "use all efforts to preserve calm."

The Bulgarian council of ministers meanwhile remained in session until early today.

Ship, of Name Once in U. S. Registry, Sunk

Radio Report Tells Of Two Torpedoings, One an 'American'

Two ships were torpedoed and sunk approximately 500 miles off the West Coast of France yesterday, a message to the Radio Marine Corporation in New York early today stated.

The message indicated that one of the vessels was "the American ship Edgehill" and the other the Empire Toucan, registry not stated.

There is no Edgehill now listed in Lloyd's Registry, and State Department and Maritime Commission officials here said early today they have no record of such a ship now under American registry. There is a British-registered ship, formerly an American vessel, named Empire Toucan.

The Lykes-Ripley Steampship Company of New Orleans formerly owned a Steamship Edgehill, which, last year, was renamed the Oremar. She is a 6,858-ton freighter. The Calmar Steamship Co., of New York, now operates the Oremar, and, last night, it was in Baltimore, Md., harbor, scheduled to leave July 2 to pick up a cargo in Philadelphia

Windsors Sip Cocktails in Spain

Madrid, June 28 (AP).—Sir Samuel Hoare, the British Ambassador, gave a cocktail party here this afternoon for the Duke and Duchess of Windsor.

Attaches said there was no truth in Rome and Berlin reports that the couple had an automobile mishap while en route to Portugal from Madrid.

Navy Orders Work Begun On 19 Ships

10 Destroyers and 9 Submarines to Cost 154 Millions; Nelson Named Buying Chief

The Navy yesterday ordered work started on 19 new ships of war amid plain indications that President Roosevelt would ask soon for vast new expenditures to equip the expanded Army.

At the same time Treasury Secretary Morgenthau issued virtual wartime regulations for control of foreign or domestic ships, providing none may leave a United States port on a foreign voyage without permission and that any such craft may be searched, and persons or packages removed, whenever a port captain orders.

Construction of ten destroyers and nine submarines, costing $154,577,000, was allotted to five Navy yards less than 24-hours after Mr. Roosevelt signed the $1,768,913,000 supplemental defense bill which provides funds for starting work on a total of 68 warships.

Contracts Due Soon

Contracts for building of more of the vessels will be executed as soon as the President signs legislation authorizing negotiation of contracts without competitive bidding.

Other activities here prompted by stormy international situations included these:

Donald M. Nelson, executive of Sears, Roebuck Co., was appointed coordinator of all purchasing by Government agencies participating in the defense program. Naming of such a buying "czar" had been urged by the National Defense Advisory Commission.

President Roosevelt said at his press conference that he would be glad to confer on the country's international position with Wendell L. Willkie, Republican Presidential nominee.

Needed in Atlantic, Says Leahy

Admiral William D. Leahy, former chief of naval operations, expressed the opinion that the fleet was on its way from Hawaii to the Atlantic Ocean, where he said, "I think we are going to need it."

Chairman Pittman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee suggested an "understanding" between the United States Fleet and the combined naval forces of Great Britain and France that could "localize" Hitler in Europe.

An increase from 14 to 20 in the number of National Guard antiaircraft regiments was announced by Acting Secretary of War Johnson.

Tobin Named by President

Mr. Roosevelt announced appointment of Daniel J. Tobin, president of the A. F. L. Teamsters' Union, as one of his administrative assistants. Tobin's precise duties were not given, but he will come here Sunday to talk to the President about them.

James V. Forrestal, who took over a similar office Wednesday, the President said, will serve as

Drafting of Oregon Senator Assures Business-Farm, East-West Ticket

By Robert C. Albright,
Post Staff Writer

Philadelphia, June 28.—The Republican National Convention today teamed Senate Minority Leader Charles L. McNary with Wendell L. Willkie to present a balanced East-West business-farm, amateur - professional Presidential ticket to the country.

McNary, the politically skillful yet liberal Western farm legislator, was drafted personally by Wilkie for the Vice Presidential nomination and quickly ratified by this precedent-breaking convention.

Before 2,000 cheer-groggy delegates and alternates departed to leave this a normal city again, Willkie, whose breathless nomination made anti-climactic today's show, gave the convention a sample of his captivating style.

Promising a "crusade" such as no Republican campaign has known, the broad shouldered nominee in a brief address to the delegates pledged himself and his party to fight for "the democratic way of life in the United States, because here stands the last firm untouched foothold of freedom in all the world."

Expected to Keep Hamilton

Chairman John Hamilton, of the Republican National Committee, then tapped down the closing curtain on this unorthodox convention. Only dangling end tonight of Republican Party business was selection of a national committee chairman to direct the Willkie-McNary campaign.

National Committeeman Edward F. Colladay, of the District of Columbia, was recognized in convention to announce a call of the national committee tomorrow morning.

Willkie, as the new titular leader of the party, can virtually name his own chairman, but indications pointed to retention of the red-haired Hamilton, selected by former Gov. Landon in 1934, in his present post.

Nomination of Senate Minority Leader McNary to make the Vice Presidential race came with only the appearance of a contest from Representative Dewey Short, of Missouri, self-styled "Hillbilly from the Ozarks."

As word quickly spread that Willkie wanted McNary, the vote for the 66-year-old Senate leader and filbert rancher, reached a first-ballot total of 500 to 108 for Short and 2 for Senator Bridges, of New Hampshire.

In the end, the spellbinding Short climbed the rostrum and moved

Dedicates Party To Task of Saving 'Last Foothold Of Freedom'

Philadelphia, June 28.—In a rip-roaring finale to the Republican National Convention, Wendell Willkie aroused a frenzy of enthusiasm this afternoon as he personally delivered a fighting pledge for the preservation of American democracy.

Delegates, who but 24 hours before had been feverishly striving to block the Willkie juggernaut, shouted themselves hoarse as the G. O. P. nominee promised to conduct "a crusading, aggressive, fighting campaign to bring unity to America."

In his first speech as Republican standardbearer, the burly Hoosier-New Yorker solemnly warned that "democracy and our way of life is facing the most crucial test it ever has faced in all its long history."

"We here are not Republicans alone, but Americans, to dedicate ourselves to the democratic way of life in the United States because here stands the last firm untouched foothold of freedom in all the world," he declared.

Superbly Staged

Willkie's appearance before the convention brought to an exciting conclusion the rather anticlimatic final session.

Earlier in the day Willkie said he would deliver his formal acceptance speech at an unspecified date in his native town of Elwood, Ind.

As for his immediate plans, he said he intended to resign from the presidency of the Commonwealth and Southern Corporation Monday, or "as soon as I can get the board of directors together." The nominee declared he would leave Philadelphia for New York tomorrow on a yacht belonging to Roy Howard, publisher of the Scripps-Howard newspapers.

The appearance of the 48-year-old nominee in the Convention Hall—announced earlier in the afternoon by Chairman Joseph W. Martin, of Massachusetts—was superbly staged.

At the close of all the routine business of the convention, a band struck some lively airs including "Heigh Ho, Heigh Ho" which, of course, the audience sang with the Willkie campaign words. Then the deep notes of an organ burst in; the 2,000 delegates and alternates on the floor arose and stood expectantly looking around; the audience of several thousand got up too—and a general air of excited anticipation could be felt throughout the huge auditorium.

A deafening burst of applause signalled the arrival of Willkie at 4:35 p. m. Escorted by two or three burly policemen, he made his way down the center aisle to the thunderous roar of a gallery that been rooting for him all week, and of delegates who, for the most part, were only today learning how to cheer for a former Democratic, $75,000-a-year utilities executive.

Accompanied By His Wife

In the company of Gov. Harold E. Stassen, of Minnesota, his floor manager; former Gov. Alf M. Landon, of Kansas, the 1936 nominee; Gov. Raymond E. Baldwin, of Connecticut, whose 16 votes were solidly Willkie from the first ballot; and Gov. John W. Bricker, of Ohio, Willkie and his wife climbed up to the platform while a deluge of balloons and confetti poured down from the roof.

After an ovation that lasted three minutes, Martin banged his enormous gavel and then proceeded to introduce Mrs. Willkie. A roar

McNary Heeds Call 'Like Good Soldier'

'I'll Do Best I Can,' Senator Declares; Sees Victory in Fall

Senator Charles L. McNary yesterday agreed somewhat reluctantly to accept the Republican Vice Presidential nomination like "a good soldier," but said that for the present he will stick to his job as Senate minority leader instead of launching an immediate campaign.

Seated calmly in his air-cooled office in the Senate Office Building, McNary was first notified of his nomination by newspapermen. A few minutes later a telephone call from Ralph Coke, Oregon national committeeman, confirmed it.

"I am profoundly conscious of the confidence reposed in me by the convention," he said. "I wish they had imposed this chore on someone else. However, I'll be a good soldier and do the best I can.

"They have selected an excellent candidate for President and prepared a good platform. The ticket should be successful in November.

Has Never Seen Willkie

"I have made no plans. I shall remain here and do my part in the Senate during this emergency."

The Republican Vice Presidential nominee said he had never so much as seen Wendell Willkie, his running mate, but he added:

"He evidently is a very unusual executive and ought to make a splendid administrator."

Senator McNary, who polled a few votes for the Presidential nomination, said he had been at Philadelphia Sunday, Monday and Tuesday but had not gone to Republican headquarters.

He declined to say how many

Democrats Find Willkie New, Strange

'Ahead of a Trend,' He Menaces the 'Ins,' Officials Declare

Democrats in official Washington saw in Wendell Willkie yesterday the threat of a Republican Roosevelt, a crusader astride an elephant and "ahead of a trend" who might be as dangerous to the "ins" as was the Roosevelt of 1932.

This was the public and private reaction yesterday among Democrats of the "old" and New Deal stamp to the action of the Republican convention in choosing the Willkie-McNary ticket.

From Postmaster General Farley to the greenest braintruster, Federal officeholders apparently were one yesterday in taking seriously the challenge delivered at Philadelphia.

Said Farley, chairman of the Democratic National Committee:

"The question is, what sets of forces, economic and social, are to conduct our Government—the historic American processes or some

Willkie-McNary Club Formed Here

The Republican State Committee of the District yesterday announced the formation of a Willkie-McNary Campaign Club headed by James A. Councilor.

Carrol C. Glover will be first vice president of the organization. Other officials will include Claude W. Owen, first vice president; Harold Rothrock, third vice president; Louise Hunter Snow, secretary.

An Ill Wind

Squall Fells Trees and Tears D. C. Steamer From Moorings

THE PICNIC WAS NO PICNIC—Two of three automobiles damaged by tree blown down during yesterday's storm. Motorists had parked the cars on Beach drive, north of Pierce Mill, to picnic in Rock Creek Park

A violent thunderstorm, following a day of near record heat and humidity, late yesterday tore the excursion boat, Robert E. Lee, loose from its moorings and swept it a half-mile downstream in the Potomac.

Earlier two youngsters among the thousands flocking to swimming pools were injured in water accidents. One of them was pulled unconscious from the pool bottom by a youthful life saving expert.

At the height of the brief storm numerous trees and a telephone wire were torn down. Hail was reported in the Northwest as gutters overflowed downtown.

The 200-foot steamer was swept downstream from its dock at Sixth street and Maine avenue southwest when a tremendous gust of wind parted four 3-inch cables.

The Lee narrowly missed several smaller craft as the squall drove it broadside down the river to Hains Point.

Just before the accident Capt. S. S. Harrington, of Baltimore, Md., had ordered Engineer Harry Hughes to start the engines, but not until the Point was reached was the latter able to get up sufficient steam to halt the boat and bring her back to her dock.

Unwilling passengers on the ride were Albert Krause, 328 N street southwest, and Luther C. Haney, of 3211 Thirteenth street northwest, who had been loading ice on the boat.

Nine-year-old Francis Bertram, of 504 South Adams street, Arlington County, Va., was rescued from Airport pool by Gerald Townsend.

"Peace . . . in the Air"

London Hears Wall Street Is Pressing for End to War

By the Associated Press

London, June 28.—A neutral diplomatic source declared tonight that a "peace move is in the air" and asserted that any attempt by Germany to invade Britain likely would await its disposition.

The neutral source said that already there was evidence of pressure from Wall Street in favor of bringing the European conflict to an end—particularly if a peace that would protect United States markets is foreseen.

This source, who has world-wide contacts, said it was believed that the British position rested on the response of the French colonies and the French fleet to the effort of French Gen. Charles de Gaulle to have Frenchmen fight on for the Allied cause.

In this connection he pointed to French Gen. Mittelhauser's decision for a cessation of hostilities in Syria.

He declared that Soviet Russia's "natural concern" regarding Adolf Hitler's ultimate intentions could easily throw Russia on the Allies' side at a peace conference table "provided the British install a genuinely leftist government which does not try to make a catspaw of the Russians."

[This dispatch passed the London censor. Only yesterday, an official British statement denied knowledge of any peace move.]

He declared that Henry Ford's refusal to manufacture airplane engines for the British probably was influenced by a feeling that there was a possibility for a peace that would leave the Ford factories converted to airplane factories without work.

Photogenic "Angel"

Cameramen and the G. O. P. Heap Bouquets on Mrs. Willkie

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

Philadelphia, June 28.—To tiny, soft-voiced Mrs. Wendell Willkie, the Republican Party this afternoon threw the greatest official bouquet ever given the wife of a candidate in the regular order of business at a national political convention.

While confetti and multicolored balloons showered from the ceiling of huge Convention Hall, she was presented to cheering delegates as the "charming lady who is to be the next mistress of the White House."

She took it like a trouper, her poise even surpassing that of her tousseled-haired husband. In looks and in gracious dignity she measured up to fondest expectations of a convention crowd whose imagination had been captured and who would have been satisfied with nothing less than a perfect dramatic ending to their week of waiting.

"Isn't she beautiful," was the cry from many sides. "Yes, she's an angel," declared the news photographer, who have learned that any Edith Wilk Willkie picture is sure to be a photographic success.

Her dress was plain dark blue with a white collar, and her hat a flower-covered affair with a veil that caught at the confetti. Two orchids and a pretty shade of lipstick helped make the colorful scene complete.

To the dozen newspaperwomen who attended her press conference at noon, Mrs. Willkie's ability to fill the role in which she has been cast came as no surprise. They

Excerpts of Talks Show Willkie Believes Allies Are 'Our First Line'

Over Our Shoulder

a preview of the Sunday Post

AS THIS is being written the Republican convention is still going strong in Philadelphia. Good news for the Quaker City's hotels and stores, but a definite problem to The Post's Sunday Editor . . . and to us. We know that there will be a wealth of convention stories in Sunday's Post (six Post reporters are covering the G. O. P. meeting, in addition to The Post's wire services and columnists, adv.), but what those stories will consist of is still a secret.

Not so secret, however, are the contents of the following Sunday Post features:

DISTRICT GOVERNMENT . . . Sunday's "Our Town in Pictures" section concludes the cameramen's tour of the District Government. You'll see . . . how the Water Department brings the Potomac to your faucet.

. . . what the Recreation Department does for Washingonians' relaxation

. . . the Budget Committee planning the spending of D. C. funds.

. . . how the Board of Public Welfare takes care of the less fortunate District residents

. . . what is done by the Weights and Measures to protect the public in its purchases of food, gasoline, etc.

. . . how the Engineering Department lays out D. C. bridges, under and over passes

. . . and many other equally important cogs in the gears that make D. C. wheels go 'round.

EXPOSE . . . The discovery of the Nazi plot to overthrow the Uruguay Government was an alarming revelation of the Nazis' progress in South America. There are many reasons why Uruguay was chosen as the starting point for the Third Reich's transformation of South America into a "new Germany." Joseph Reed tells you all about them in Sunday's Post.

REED

DEFENSE . . . Gerald Gross continues his series of personality sketches of defense council members. This week's subject . . . Ralph Budd, in charge of transportation.

THIRD TERM . . . As the Democrats prepare for their convention, the question of a third term is still unanswered. So, the Gallup Poll tells you whom the rank-and-file Democrats would vote for if . . . if Roosevelt is nominated and . . . if the President declines a third term. Speaking of Roosevelt, what does the public think of his action in letting England buy airplanes that were being used by our own Army and Navy? The Gallup Poll gives you the answer to that one, too.

ROOSEVELT

PIANIST . . . An up-to-date list of interesting people would not be complete without the name of Alec Templeton. You've heard this blind pianist's programs on the air. What is he like? Why has he become such a success? Jack Sher tells you all about him in Sunday's Post.

WAR . . . With Eddie Folliard covering the political war in Philadelphia it seemed for a time that the Sunday's Post's weekly war review would have to bow out in favor of the Republicans. But the problem has been solved, Frank Dennis takes over where Eddie left off last week.

It's quite a job trying to get all of the features of the big Sunday Post into this single column. Not so hard, though, for you to find out for yourself why so many people like the Sunday edition. Just call NAtional 4200 and ask for homedelivery.

Unity Keystone Of Defense, Is His View

'Isn't Only That We Hate' Hitler, 'We Must Also Fear Him,' He Has Said

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, June 28.—Wendell L. Willkie, Republican nominee for President, has emphasized these precepts in his foreign policy statements: Stimulate trade, keep out of war, aid the Allies and strengthen United States defenses.

"Plainly," he once said, "all defense rests upon industrial defense, without which we cannot produce the equipment that we need. But the keystone of industrial defense is national unity."

Other foreign affairs statements by Willkie have included these::

April, 1940 issues of Fortune Magazine: "It makes a great deal of difference to us—politically, economically and emotionally—what kind of world exists beyond our shores. We cannot build our new world here without taking that other world into account.

"We have been sure for a number of years that we don't want to have any part in anybody's war.

Hull Pacts Called "Dead"

"Our foreign policies should be forthright and clear. We are opposed to war. But we do not intend to relinquish our right to sell whatever we want to those defending themselves from aggression. And we are not so foolish as to believe that these sales of products at our ports, with our ships withdrawn from combat areas, can possibly involve us in hostilities."

May 4, 1940: "We must develop our foreign markets through international trade agreements with reference to industrial products. . . . Our present standard of living can be maintained without foreign trade only through an economy managed by private monopoly or public control. Either of these would mean climbing into a frying pan to get out of a fire."

(Later, however, he said the Hull trade agreements were a "dead" issue—legislated out of the picture by Hitler's conquests in Europe.)

(When peace comes), and assuming we remain neutral, the United States is going to be not only the boss creditor nation of the world but is going to be the leader of the world in every other department," he said on May 4, 1940. "We must use that opportunity to establish larger trade areas and an international monetary standard.

"We Shall Have to Meet Them"

"In addition, despite the views of the narrow isolationist, America does have a vital interest in the continuation in this world of the English, French and Norwegian way of life. We must at all hazards stay out of war, but . . . it may well be that the most effective way of us keeping out of this war will be by helping the democracies in every way possible, within the limits of international law.

". . . If the totalitarian states prevail, the odds are very substantial that we shall have to meet them in armed conflict when they have been victorious over the democracies and are truculent and strong."

May 15, 1940: "But in this problem (of aiding the Allies) the important factor is not money or credit; it is the strength of American industry. The basic problem of our foreign policy every man knows; and that is that the United States must be strong and united at home . . . What we must have in this country above everything else is prompt domestic recovery."

May 20, 1940: "Surely it must be evident to every citizen that coordination of our manpower and our vast resources must be the watchword of defense. The present Administration has proved itself incapable of such coordination."

"Must Also Fear" Hitler

May 28, 1940: "We don't like this man Adolf Hitler . . . But it isn't only that we hate him. We must also fear him."

"We cannot leave our shores and our cities exposed to an invader who has so far not hesitated to destroy anything that happened to cross his path."

". . . England and France constitute our first line of defense against Hitler."

"I should like to ask Secretary Hull to ask the democracies, publicly and openly in the name of the American people, what help, short of troops, the American people can give."

"Surely the Administration is not presenting the facts fairly when it tells us that we have a well-equipped modern army. Nor for that matter has it given us any realistic idea of what a well-equipped army and a big air force will cost."

"Unless we start the wheels of our economy functioning, that cost of defense will come out of the standard of living of the ordinary fellow. It will be paid by the poor instead of the rich."

Democrats See Peril in Willkie

new and somewhat foreign methods of control."

Comments of Democratic leaders yesterday made much of Willkie's utilities background:

President Roosevelt at a press conference delivered an indirect jab at Willkie's connection with a large utilities concern by relating an incident at the White House. Yesterday morning when he was ready to go to his office, the President said, he found that someone had cut off the power switch that operates the White House elevator.

Chuckling, the President said he hoped the incident had no connection with what happened Thursday night at Philadelphia.

"Electric Personality"

Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, a close friend of Vice President Garner, took the same tack, but more bluntly:

"Mh. Willkie has an electric background. He has an electric personality and an electric campaign chest. However, he had better prepare for a 'blackout' in November."

Speaker Bankhead, of Alabama, echoed Farley's note of "foreign" doctrines:

Willkie's nomination, Bankhead said, provides a "clear-cut issue" between the two major parties.

"If the voters wish to place the executive in the control of forces which are somewhat foreign to our usual American way of life and which will doubtless largely dominate the actions of the Republican nominee, they have a constitutional right to do so in November."

Secretary of Interior Ickes exuded confidence as a third term advocate.

Secretary Ickes said:

"Franklin D. Roosevelt will be renominated and reelected. As between a man experienced in public business and possessing training and strength in international affairs, on the one hand, and a man with no experience except as a clever lawyer and successful public-utility-holding company representative, the people, at this gravest crisis since we became a nation, will choose the courage and wisdom of President Roosevelt."

"Insull the Second"

Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, public power advocate, agreed.

"Willkie is Insull the Second," Norris told the Associated Press. "He is head of a great utility empire. The power trust was behind him and gave him this nomination.

"I don't believe there is a ghost of a chance of Willkie being elected, but he is going to make a great campaign. This same combination that nominated him and deceived the convention is going to try to put him over in November."

Agree on Two Weapons

At hasty conferences and telephone chats, Democratic strategists in the Capital yesterday had agreed on two weapons to use in stopping in November the man the G. O. P. old guard could not stop Thursday night.

Point one, top Democrats told The Post, will be an attack on Willkie's connections with the public utilities industry.

Captains of the Democratic National Committee headquarters smiled yesterday at mention of Willkie as a champion of "free private enterprise." They countered that Commonwealth & Southern Corporation is a "monopoly," thriving on the "absence of free enterprise." On this basis, they believe, they can damage Willkie.

Point two will be a charge that Willkie has no previous experience in public office and therefore is not "fit for the job" in these times. Lawyers at the Securities Commission, who have met Willkie across the hearing-room table many times and find him an aggressive witness, said they doubted if this attack would stick. But party strategists insisted it would be a telling point in the campaign.

"Direct Blow to Hitler"

London, June 28 (INS).—The nomination of Wendell L. Willkie was characterized tonight by authoritative quarters as a "direct blow to Hitler."

Italians Not Pleased

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, June 28.—The nomination of Wendell Willkie has been something of a blow to the Italians. Their American correspondents had impressed them with the fact that the Republican Party was thoroughly isolationist, and would not follow the Roosevelt policy of vigorous help for Britain. Now they have seen the Republicans nominate a candidate who has come out strongly in favor of aid for Britain, even though the United States is to keep out of the war.

McNary Heeds Call

speeches he may make before November, but expressed the view that the campaign would not get in full swing before September. If Congress is still in session at that time, he indicated, he will take time out as Senate minority leader.

Term Expires in 1943

As his term as senior Senator of Oregon does not expire until 1943, McNary is assured of several years more service in the Senate, whether as Vice President or as minority leader.

McNary, a veteran of 23 years service in the Senate, offers a striking contrast both in personality and background to the dynamic Presidential nominee.

Long a leader of the "farm bloc," the Oregonian is an able lawyer who boasts that he is a farmer. Before coming to Washington he was dean of the Willamette College of Law and afterward was an associate justice of the Oregon Supreme Court.

Always immaculately dressed, McNary is a slender, dapper man whose appearance would contrast sharply with the seeming careless habits and dress of Willkie. Although he is one of the less voluble members of the Senate, the Vice Presidential nominee has a reputation for shrewdness and ability in directing the affairs of the minority party on the floor.

Fought Hull Treaties

Senator McNary voted for many of the New Deal acts, such as the AAA, the NRA, TVA, and Social Security legislation, but he was one of the most effective leaders in blocking the expansion of the Supreme Court, sought by President Roosevelt.

Unlike Willkie, McNary is an outspoken opponent of the Hull reciprocal trade treaties. He also is a strong advocate of government power projects, such as the Bonneville and other dams built by PWA funds early in the New Deal.

McNary was coauthor of the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill, which was a forerunner of the AAA, but the legislation, though passed twice by Congress, was vetoed by President Coolidge.

His identification with farm relief and public power projects is expected to offset Willkie's link to private power and Eastern financial interests.

Has Homespun Background

McNary has a homespun pioneer background that fits in better with the pattern of the traditional President than with that of a Vice President. He was born in Salem, the little capital of Oregon, on June 12, 1874, the tenth child of a family which had trekked across the Oregon Trail to settle in the fir timberlands.

Senator McNary came to the Senate in 1917 as appointed successor to Harry Lane and had been reelected for every term thereafter.

Home Town Jubilant

Salem, Oreg., June 28 (AP).—Charlie McNary's home town was jubilant today because the Republican National convention nominated him for the Vice Presidency.

Gov. Charles A. Sprague, who started the McNary Presidential campaign last October 7 in a speech to Oregon Young Republicans at The Dalles, was the happiest of all.

"Just think," the Governor said, "a few days ago we were dreaming about what a great thing it would be if Charlie were chosen as a Vice Presidential candidate. It seemed remote then, but now that dream has come true."

The Governor, although the Oregon delegation to the Republican National Convention wouldn't agree with him, had visions of a Willkie-McNary ticket. The delegation resented the Governor's telegram Wednesday urging support of Willkie if McNary couldn't win the Presidential nomination.

The Governor said today it is "a great ticket, well balanced, with men splendidly equipped to lead the party to victory and the country to National security and internal prosperity."

McNary's home State popularity was reflected in the May primary. He got more votes for President than President Roosevelt and Vice President Garner combined.

His two hobbies are raising flowers and playing with his 5-year-old adopted daughter.

the unanimous approval of McNary.

"Like Bill Bryan, I'm getting the applause and Charlie McNary's getting the votes," Short said.

The popular Senate leader, one of the 13 in Thursday night's field for the Presidential nomination, was first reported cool to the second-place offer. Last obstacles to his acceptance were broken down at a conference at noon between Willkie, former Gov. Landon, of Kansas, and Representative Halleck, of Indiana, Willkie's nominator. This conference was called after Washington reports of McNary's coolness to the offer. Landon, it was learned, personally importuned McNary to accept.

Never a "Willkie before Philadelphia man," he was placed in nomination by W. S. Moscrip, a Minnesota delegate, who was recognized for the purpose by the Oregonian's Senate colleague, John G. Townsend, jr., temporarily in the chair.

In swift order, the McNary nomination was seconded by Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan, recent candidate for the Republican nomination; Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts, another colleague; State Senator Walter Jones, of Kansas, and former Senator David Reed, of Pennsylvania.

Representative Short was first nominated by his House colleague, Representative Knutson, of Minnesota. Bridges was never formally nominated, but received 2 of the Texas delegation's 26 votes.

The popular Oregonian's selection added balance to the Republican ticket by linking McNary's appeal to the West and Northwest farm and dairy interests with Willkie's basic strength in the East.

For once, a progressive business man and a liberal farm leader go before the country on the same Republican ticket, a combination not only tradition-breaking, but double-barreled to bag votes.

As the co-author of the old McNary-Haugen bill and other pioneer farm measures since he went to the Senate 23 years ago, McNary never has been orthodox. But his adeptness in politics has been demonstrated in repeated coalition raids on New Deal measures with only a hand full of Republican Senate votes. This political skill, Willkie an organization outsider, can use, together with the contact it supplies with the old line party leaders.

G. O. P. strategists said McNary's nomination gave the ticket "perfect political balance."

Speculate Concerning Halleck

Meanwhile, as a 15,000 hall capacity audience battled for 200 taxicabs in Philadelphia's rush hour to meet week-end train schedules home, curious delegates were asking what was in store for Representative Halleck, the Hoosier who nominated Willkie.

Perhaps he would succeed Hamilton as National Committee Chairman. But Halleck answered that one. He said he wanted only one job—the one he now has in the House.

For this hoarse-voiced city, there were no more thrills. All that could happen since Willkie first took it by storm, had happened.

Designation of the Senate minority leader to campaign for Willkie was an accepted, one-ballot affair, highlighted chiefly by the nominating speeches and tributes to both running mates.

Vandenberg's mention of McNary "as the most popular legislator who ever sat in the Senate, brought a resounding cheer. The applause came again when he said Willkie has captured America's imagination, hearts, confidence, "and he will capture their votes in November."

Senator Lodge, also seconding, praised McNary, as a "profound intellectual force" in legislation—a "wise counselor, faithful friend, and a humane heart."

Former Senator Reed, who followed, called the Oregon Senator the Nation's foremost student of the problems of the farmer.

Earlier, Moscrip made the original nominating speech, saying the party is giving Willkie "a running mate who will bring to the office of Vice President the highest ideals of integrity."

Representative Short, who withdrew from the Vice Presidential running to make McNary's selection unanimous, declared all diverse party factions are now united behind Willkie, "who will tear this New Deal to pieces between now and November.

"With Willkie we will get the votes of industry in the East, and with Charlie McNary the votes of the farmers in the West," Short asserted. The delegates liked that, too. But they were busy looking up train schedules home, and their throats were too dry and sore to do anything but rasp.

'I Was Never So Surprised,' Mrs. McNary Tells Friends

'I Know He Did It For the Party,' Wife Of Nominee Asserts

By the Associated Press

Salem, Oreg., June 28.—Mrs. Charles L. McNary returned home from a shopping trip today a little out of breath. Someone downtown told her her husband had just been given the Republican Vice Presidential nomination.

"I was never so surprised in my life," she said. "I didn't even know Charles was up for the Vice Presidency.

"The last I knew—after listening to reports on the convention yesterday—was that he did not win the Presidential nomination," the wife of Oregon's "Charlie" explained.

Until she hears from Mr. McNary, she said, she had no plans for the immediate future.

Heard it at Grocery

Sitting on the lawn at her ranch home while knitting a yellow baby blanket for the French war refugees, Mrs. McNary told reporters she was in a grocery when someone told her that her husband had been nominated and had accepted.

"I couldn't believe it," she said. "I said it couldn't be true, because Charles had wired me this morning he wouldn't accept the nomination.

"But I know he did it for the party. I wish Charles would come home as he needs the rest, but now, since Congress probably will be in session all summer, I don't suppose he will get any rest."

Mrs. McNary has permitted her husband to be the political light of the family, and except for occasional activity with semipolitical women's groups, has remained in the background.

She has the same love for their 600-acre farm on the outskirts of the city that her husband bears. She often has been hostess to important political figures in their large home, but is most happy, her friends say, when neighbors and other acquaintances "just drop in."

She shares her husband's interest in growing flowers, but her chief interests are her husband and their daughter, Charlotte, 5. The McNary's surprised friends in 1935 by announcing that they had adopted her in Philadelphia.

Mr. and Mrs. McNary were married in 1923, after his first wife died of injuries suffered in an automobile accident. His present wife is the former Cornelia Morton, of Washington, D. C., his secretary.

that shook the rafters greeted her brief bow and hand-wave to the crowd.

"A great American, a virile and forceful American," Martin described Willkie to the crowd, as he presented "The next President of the United States."

Up to the front of the platform, bathed in the dazzling glare of a dozen tremendous movie spotlights, stepped the nominee as he waved and tossed his head in greeting to the thousands of admirers in the audience and especially in the gallery.

Willkie's remarks were brief and continually punctuated with applause. After complimenting Martin for "impartiality" and "ability" in presiding over the convention, the nominee assured the delegates that he had made not a "single pledge, promise or understanding of any kind except for the advancement of your cause and the preservation of American democracy."

When he declared that "in America we all have a common purpose at this time that this way of life shall not pass from this earth," the building fairly rocked with applause and shouts.

Asserting that "only 48 days ago I started out to preach to the American people the doctrine of unity, the doctrine of the destiny of America," Willkie said that his nomination "proves conclusively how appealing is this simple doctrine to the American people."

Asking the Republicans to help him, he said "we can not fail if we stand together in one united fight."

At the conclusion of his speech, Willkie was given a two-minute ovation which he acknowledged with repeated waving of first one hand then the other, then both. His hair falling over his forehead as usual, the naminee looked out over the sea of cheering thousands with a faint smile.

He then had to go through the ordeal of waving and shaking hands with prominent party members all over again for the benefit of press photographers—and he didn't seem to mind. In a multitude of poses the camera caught him with Gov. Baldwin; with former Gov. Landon, whose switch of Kansas votes to Willkie accelerated the tidal wave, and with diminutive Representative Martin.

Finally when the picture taking was over and the convention hall was slowly being cleared, Willkie burst into a broad grin, grabbed a neighboring microphone and shouted into it the thought that today dominated the mind of every delegate, every alternate, every newspaperman and probably every resident of this quiet City of Brotherly Love:

"Now I'm going to sleep for a week."

Defense Publicity Agency Reported

President Roosevelt has on his desk blueprints of a Government agency for publicity designed to "sell" national defense to the country, The Post has been informed.

The agency would begin to function when and if involvement in foreign war should loom as a more direct possibility.

In charge of the agency would be Lowell Mellett, kindly-eyed publicity wizard who has helped Roosevelt in political campaigns and now heads the Office of Government Reports, an adjunct of the White House.

Mentioned as an alternative chief of the Defense Publicity Bureau is Robert W. Horton, young chief of information for the National Defense Advisory Commission. One version of the blueprint calls for merely expanding Horton's information section to become a full publicity bureau covering all phases of educating the country on defense.

Horton insisted "I never heard of it."

Mellett said: "The story is cockeyed. There is nothing to it."

Japanese Envoy Urges U. S. Amity

New York, June 28 (AP).—Kensuke Horinouchi, Japanese Ambassador to the United States, pleaded tonight for this country and his to pursue a common policy "to keep the Pacific peaceful and free from the effects of the war in Europe."

"If each of our two nations works toward that end, it is certain that peace and trade of the Pacific can be preserved," he told nearly 1,400 guests at a dinner celebration of Japan's 26 centuries.

found her modest, obviously shaken and breakfastless.

But they found that she is neither a country club debutante type nor a shy little woman with no thoughts of her own. Like her husband, she is smalltown born and possesses the qualities of "typical American." She reads books on politics and economics, is a member of a sorority and considers a visit to an art museum "a good afternoon's entertainment."

She believes all American women are interested in politics and social questions and she thinks it is all right for a First Lady to give radio talks and write a column "if she is qualified to do so."

From the stage this afternoon she waved to Mrs. Ogden Reid and other friends in the audience. Cheering her from a seat with the Ohio delegation was a broadly smiling Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, who had backed Senator Robert A. Taft for the nomination.

Huge "Willkie for President" buttons had displaced all other signs on the dresses of women present—and the feminine voices held out until the photo finish.

Mrs. Charles L. McNary, already gone to Oregon for the summer, missed the applause for Senator McNary when he was nominated for the Vice Presidency. Persons who know both Mrs. Willkie and Mrs. McNary predicted they "will like each other."

Seven of Mrs. Willkie's Indiana friends staged what was to be an impromptu breakfast for her this morning—but learned her day was "too full for breakfast" and decided they themselves were too excited to eat.

Mrs. Charles A. Halleck, wife of the Congressman who gave the Willkie nominating speech, was among them, as were also Mrs. Florence King, dean of the home economics department at the University of Maryland.

'What Happened?' Asks Dazed Philadelphia, Clearing Away Debris of Willkie Tornado

'That Guy Is Joan Of Arc With Pants On,' Delegate Quips

By Hedley Donovan,
Post Staff Writer

Philadelphia, June 28.—The staid old city of William Penn is digging itself out tonight after the tornado that blew in from Indiana.

Dazed delegates are wandering through streets and hotel lobbies deep in the campaign literature of a dozen defeated candidates.

There is pretty general agreement that it really did happen but no one knows exactly how. Every other delegate on the floor today looked as if he wanted to step up to the first citizen with a kindly face and confide, "I can't remember a thing after the third round."

Post-mortems on last night's balloting were conducted in hotel suites and convention corridors, but most of the town agreed with the Pennsylvania delegate who got off the wise crack of the day:

"You can't analyze a miracle. That guy is Joan of Arc with pants on."

The successful candidate today faces the full glare of the publicity which will follow him now for at least 20 weeks.

More than 200 reporters, press photographers and newsreel men were waiting in the Warwick Hotel ballroom when Willkie arrived for his first press conference as nominee, 45 minutes late and "100 hours short on sleep."

He was photographed from every angle, at ranges from 2 to 50 feet. He waved, smiled and gestured, as specified by the cameramen.

Questioned on a report that President Roosevelt would invite him to a conference on foreign policy, Willkie said, "I'd be delighted to see Franklin D. Roosevelt at any time. I think one should always be courteous to his predecessor," he added.

He threw one more punch in the direction of the White House.

"I've been there before," he said, "and the President does most of the talking."

He's For the Hatch Bill

Publisher Roy Howard asked, "How about the Hatch bill?"

"I am a strong advocate of the Hatch bill," Willkie replied. "I will ask the treasurer of the national committee to impose its limitations on the Republican Party."

Willkie said he hoped campaign contributions would be small in size, but "widely diffused in number." He would draw the line at $5,000, he stated.

The shaggy-haired candidate denied any intention of building up a brain trust.

"The brain trust is the biggest myth in American politics," he said. "A brain trust takes two things—brains and a trust. We haven't been getting anything but a trust."

Willkie, wearing a campaign-creased blue suit, told the reporters he hadn't taken his candidacy seriously until May 11. That was the date, he said, when he accepted an invitation from Minnesota Republicans to "test the reaction in the Middle West."

"Wholly Amateurish"

He laughed off a reporter's description of his whirlwind campaign as a blitzkrieg. He said it was a "29-day expression of the opinion of the people." He ran a big hand through the touseled hair and issued a correction: "No, that must add up to more than 29 days."

The organization which backed his blinding sprint to the nomination was "wholly amateurish," Willkie said. He predicted that "things are going to get better organized now."

He said he would be giving detailed statements of his position on national issues within the near future, but took time to make these points:

"There is no basis for the claim I am an interventionist.

"Congress ought to stay in session because of the very difficult and delicate foreign situation."

The major campaign issues will be "National unity, building of adequate defense and restoring the domestic economy."

Willkie said he didn't know whether his nomination had increased the likelihood that President Roosevelt will be the Democratic candidate.

Police Are Indulgent

"But I hope he will be," Willkie added.

Many Willkie backers were still toasting their sixth-ballot triumph at dawn today. They circulated through hotel lobbies still gay with Dewey, Taft and Vandenberg banners.

In the lobby of the Benjamin Franklin Hotel an enormous photograph of Frank Gannett looked down on Willkie men chanting, "Where there's a Willkie, there's a way."

At one street corner Philadelphia police watched indulgently as a dozen men huddled over a pair of dice and several denominations of good Republican money.

Luncheon guests in the Bellevue Stratford Hotel were startled today to see a dozen women put down their iced tea and break into gentle song. You may hear the melody from time to time this summer:

"Heigh-ho, heigh-ho,
"It's back to work we go;
"With Wendell Willkie leading us
"The jobs will grow,
"Heigh-ho, heigh-ho,
"We've all been feeling low,
"But Willkie's hand will save the land,
"Heigh-ho, heigh-ho."

Germans Bomb Demilitarized Channel Islands

London, June 28 (AP).—German man planes dropped bombs on the Channel islands tonight, shortly after the British government had announced that they were being demilitarized.

News of the raid was received within three hours of the announcement of the islands' demilitarization. The British said all armed forces and equipment had been withdrawn from the islands, which are just off the German-occupied coast of France. The islands are Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney and Sark.

[Presumably, the British decided the islands cannot be defended and desired to make them "open" territory.]

'Father of Russian Aviation' Is Dead, Friends Disclose

The death of Chessborough J. H. MacKenzie-Kennedy, of New York City, "father of Russian aviation," was disclosed yesterday by friends. Mr. MacKenzie-Kennedy died Wednesday night in Georgetown University Hospital. He was 52 years old.

A native of Scotland who spent his most productive years in Russia, MacKenzie-Kennedy was the inventor of the deadly airplane tail gun, which he sold to Great Britain for $150,000. For the last several years he has lived in this country, having married an American girl and applied for United States citizenship.

The inventor, who is credited with helping to develop the modern giant airplane, came of a famous British family, but he went to Russia some years prior to the revolution.

The title of "father of Russian aviation" was conferred on him by Lieut. Col. Roustam Bek in "Aerial Russia."

Home Town Folk Celebrate 'Win' Willkie's Nomination

Ellwood, Ind., Police Don't Even Attempt To Control Pandemonium That Breaks Loose When Victory Is Announced

By the Associated Press

Elwood, Ind., June 28.—After tense hours of listening to radios, the 10,000 residents of Elwood, birthplace of Wendell L. Willkie, turned loose and shouted themselves hoarse when he received the Republican Presidential nomination.

Motorists weaved their way through hundreds of pedestrians, blowing their horns continually; factory whistles let loose shrill blasts; citizens afoot blew horns, beat drums, pans and cans, and there was general pandemonium.

Business in stores nearly reached a standstill during the day as hardly anyone ventured out of earshot of a radio. But it would have been next to impossible to get that far away from one. Virtually every store, shop, factory and home had loud speakers blaring the proceedings from Philadelphia.

Willkie—known to friends here as "Win"—lived here as a child and youth, leaving for Indiana University at Bloomington after graduation from Elwood High School. He has promised Elwood to come "back home" to deliver his acceptance speech.

Coffeyville, Kans., June 28 (AP).—Coffeyville citizens who studied history under Wendell Willkie, a teacher in the high school here in 1913-1915, expressed elation today over his nomination for President by the Republican Party.

"I'm a Democrat, but I'm for Wendell Willkie, my old teacher," said Maude Coverdale Bradbury.

"I think Wendell Willkie has the qualifications to make a real President," commented T. W. Higginson, a banker. "He was my teacher."

Mrs. Willkie's Home Town

Rushville, Ind., June 28 (AP).—The fire siren wailed late last night, but it was only because a man who owns 1,400 acres of farmland in Rush County had been chosen Republican Presidential nominee.

Wendell L. Willkie frequently visits his five farms, managed by Miss Mary Sleeth, former Indiana Republican vice chairman. The nominee also owns a business building and stock in a bank in Rushville. Mrs. Willkie, the former Mary Wilk, was born here, and her mother, Mrs. Cora Wilk, still lives here.

Turks Call Up 500,000 Men

By the Associated Press

Istanbul, June 28.—Turkey mobilized half a million men and poured both surface warships and submarines into the Black Sea tonight.

Southeastern Europe stirred with old hates and new ones.

Significantly, the Turkish fleet, followed by a submarine flotilla, was headed north, probably to cruise past the coast of Bulgaria, former segment of the Ottoman empire.

There also were intensive troop movements throughout Turkey, mainly in the direction of the Bulgarian frontier.

[A United Press dispatch from Istanbul said Turkey was reported authoritatively to be moving heavy guns into Beykoz and Anadoli on the Bosporus, where they would be in a position to command the narrow passageway between the Black Sea and the Sea of Marmora. At the same time additional reinforcements were said to be moving up from Anatolia toward Thrace.]

Aside from this manifest warning to Bulgaria and what might stand behind her, the Turks were taking every precaution to defend the Dardanelles from attack from the east.

Turkey was vitally concerned by Russia's thrust into Rumania.

Aside from new mobilizations pushing Turkey's men under arms past 500,000, the government was understood to have completed a plan to double that force within 24 hours, if need be.

Officer, Call a Cop! Shop Looted Again Under Police Noses

Working by the light cast from the windows of Police Headquarters, burglars entered and ransacked the Courthouse Coffee Shop, 458 Indiana avenue northwest, for the thirteenth time in three years early yesterday.

And to make matters more embarrassing to the law enforcers at work less than 30 feet away, it was the second time this week the place was looted.

Mrs. Alice Rhind, proprietor of the cafe, discovered the latest burglary and said the intruders had used a glass cutter on a window in a rear door. A pane in the same window had been smashed Sunday night by thieves and had just been replaced, she declared.

Her report, which might easily have been a carbon copy of her previous reports, listed between $15 and $20 worth of candy and cigarettes missing—the same items and quantity taken the other times.

Pope Blesses Chaplains Of Prisons

Catholic Institute Receives Benediction At Closing Session

America's foremost Catholic prison chaplains left here yesterday, carrying the blessing of Pope Pius XII to 100,000 men under their spiritual guidance.

"Upon you and this work," the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, Apostolic Delegate to the United States, told delegates at closing session of the Catholic Prison Chaplain's Institute, "I invoke in the name of the Holy Father the apostolic blessing.

"It is extended to each one of you; to each one of the fields of your work and to all those people who are entrusted to your care." Archbishop Cicognani said from the rostrum of the hall of the National Catholic School of Social Service, 2400 Nineteenth street northwest.

"I exhort you in a special way to seek those souls entrusted to your charity; to those souls which appear abandoned—but they are not abandoned when they are in the presence of the apostle speaking of the charity of Christ," he said.

Shortly before adjournment, the priests unanimously agreed upon retaining the present committee on Catholic prison chaplains, the Right Rev. Msgr. John O'Grady, secretary of the National Conference of Catholic Charities, continuing as chairman.

Functioning under the charities organization, the committee also includes the Rev. Francis J. Lane, chaplain of Elmira State Reformatory, Elmira, N. Y.; the Rev. Bernard M. Martin, of Sing Sing Prison; the Rev. John P. Farrell, of the Illinois State Penitentiary, Pontiac, Ill., and the Rev. John P. Byrne, United States Industrial Reformatory, Chillicothe, Ohio.

1941 Scene Undecided

Through the committee it is hoped to conduct a revitalized program for the extension of spiritual work among prisoners. The scene of the 1941 institute will be decided later.

Early in the day, the delegates heard the Most Rev. Gerald P. O'Hara, D. D., J. U. D., V. G., Bishop of Savannah and Atlanta, in discussing "The Christian Approach to the Criminal," declare that, while psychology and psychiatry can do much in the field of criminal rehabilitation, only the Christian way can really save souls.

"They show what is wrong with man," he said of psychiatry and allied sciences, "but can do little toward changing his character."

"Something else besides psychiatry is needed to effect real change in the human heart and will," he said, "and we may be sure that divine wisdom devised the best plan when it pointed to the sacraments and to the supernatural helps as the best means for effecting a spiritual regeneration."

Sharing the program, the Rev. George A. O'Meara, chaplain of the State prison at San Quentin, Calif., traced most criminal careers to an abandonment of religion. He cited a survey which indicated that 90 per cent of inmates in the country's prisons had been away from the practice of their religion for a minimum of two years, and a maximum of 40.

Pleading for more "prison-consciousness" among people on the outside, he said they must be convinced that Christ has a right within the prison walls. The chaplain plays an important role in forming men to be safe risks on parole, he said.

'Good-by,' Edison Says, Taking Hair Shirt With Him

The world across the Atlantic may be falling apart and this Nation may be preparing for whatever blows may come, but—Acting Secretary of the Navy Louis Compton still has his sense of humor, and Charles Edison, the retiring Secretary, his hair shirt.

While Edison was head of the Navy Department he sometimes good humoredly referred to Compton as "my hair shirt." Yesterday a group of Edison's associates came to his suite at the Hay-Adams House to say good-by and good luck in his campaign for the New Jersey governorship.

There were presents. Three of them were flags—the national colors and the flags of the Assistant Secretary and the Secretary as tribute to the first citizen ever to hold both offices. The fourth, passed around for inspection in fancy gift wrappings, was a regulation Navy shirt impregnated plentifully with short, wiry horsehairs.

Candidate Edison and Mrs. Edison roared with laughter, as did the guests—William E. Ohland, special assistant to Compton; Capt. Charles Fisher, director of shore establishments; Capt. Morton L. Deyo, Edison's aide and Commander Ralph Riggs, Compton's aide.

Mrs. Willkie Met Husband At a Wedding

His Mother Told Her Of Hoosier's Decision To Make Her His Wife

Philadelphia, June 28 (AP).—She maid of honor at a wedding, he was an usher, and they met in his home town, Elwood, Ind. She was Miss Edith Wilk, of Rushville, Ind.—he was Wendell Willkie; and he said it would be simple to change her name "because it's Wilk already."

That's what he told his mother as soon as he got home. He said he had met a girl, and fallen in love. Miss Wilk came back to Elwood a few weeks later to visit her newly-married friends, and Willkie's parents dropped in from across the street.

Wendell Willkie's mother beamed at Edith and said, "so you're the little girl Wendell's going to marry."

No Mistake

Edith blushed, said there must be some mistake, said she hadn't heard a thing about it. "Oh, no," said Wendell's mother. "There's no mistake."

Soon Miss Edith Wilk became Mrs. Willkie. Today she laughs merrily over that incident and also at the memory of the difficulties she and Willkie had getting married.

The wedding was set for 8:30 p. m. A big wedding at her home in Rushville, with white satin, a veil and flowers.

A blizzard started. The bridegroom was stuck in the snow. His train stalled 25 miles away, and the roads were impassable.

He had the bouquet, too. White orchids and lilies of the valley. She had telephoned him to bring them from Louisville, Ky., where he was stationed in Camp Taylor, after enlisting in the Army.

She's Had Two Jobs

Willkie, stalled at a way station, kept telephoning his bride-to-be that Saturday afternoon, Sunday and most of Monday. He finally arrived Monday, and they were married on January 14, 1918.

Today Mrs. Willkie is youthful-looking, friendly, with soft chestnut hair curling around her face. She says she's had only two jobs in her life—"one taking care of a library, and one taking care of a little boy and his father." For a while before her marriage, she was assistant librarian in Elwood.

The Willkie's son, Philip, is 20.

Avoids Spotlight

She wants the spotlight on her husband alone, and does no campaigning, but says he's "got the qualities for a good President."

She was born in Nashville, Tenn., but grew up in Rushville, Ind., 60 miles from Elwood. Both she and Willkie went to Indiana University. She's a member of Kappa Alpha Theta.

They've lived in New York 11 years, in an apartment on upper Fifth avenue.

In the campaign, she's been so inconspicuous that her dressmaker, who knew her when she was Edith Wilk, asked her a few weeks ago, "Mrs. Willkie, is this Willkie they're talking about a relative of yours?"

"Slightly," laughed Mrs. Willkie. "He's my husband."

U. S. Plague Toll Is Low

There have been 499 recorded cases of plague in human beings in the United States since 1900, with 314 deaths, according to a survey made public yesterday by the United States Public Health Service. Only eight cases of human plague have been reported in this country in 1930-39, it was asserted.

The disease assumes significant public health importance and becomes a problem fraught with potential danger in view of expanding areas in which plague-infection in wild rodents and insect parasites have been found in recent years, officials pointed out.

Hearing to Be Held on 21st St. Parking Ban

A public hearing will be held early next week on a recent order banning parking on Twenty-first street northwest adjacent to the K street market, the Commissioners announced yesterday.

Because of numerous objections, the order has been held in abeyance. Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, is said to have urged the hearing in behalf of farmers who would be deprived of parking space while selling produce at the market.

Nazi Plan to Rule Norse Heard Here

The Norwegian legation said last night it had received reports that German officials are trying to set up in Nazi-occupied Norway a council that would take over the functions of King Haakon and the government.

The King would waive his constitutional duties and the government would be dismissed under an arrangement which the German regime "is attempting to make Norway accept," the legation said it heard.

Church of the Week

Wallace Memorial's Summer Bible School Enrolls 115

Enthusiastic Turnout Presages Another Successful Season

By Robert Tate Allan.

The annual summer Bible school of Wallace Memorial United Presbyterian Church got off on what presages to be another successful season last Monday, with 115 enrolled.

Among the oldest and largest groups of its kind in the city, the school will meet daily from 9 a. m. to 12 noon, Monday through Friday, until July 26, and is open to the entire Petworth Community.

Serving under Mrs. Lawrence White, supervisor, the staff includes Mrs. Ted Crumm, kindergarten and nursery, assisted by Miss Georgie Jeffries; Mrs. C. S. Trimble, primary, and Mrs. G. L. Hoyme, assistant; Miss Effie A. Collamore, junior A group; Mrs. Ray A. Blackburn, junior B group, and Jack Allee, intermediates, with Dr. Charles Hawthorne, pastor, teaching one hour daily in that department.

According to Dr. Hawthorne, who helped initiate the first school back in 1926—two years after becoming Wallace pastor—the school last year drew students from 11 denominations, and is one of the only all-Bible summer schools in the city.

Church Leadership Developed

Credits are given for completed work in the school which is maintained through voluntary contributions. Women's classes and missionary organizations alternate in providing refreshments on Fridays. The students' ages range from 3 to 17.

Dr. Hawthorne, one of the city's most active clergymen and youth counselors, yesterday expressed pride at the contribution that youth has made to the development of the Wallace congregation, which meets at New Hampshire avenue and Randolph street northwest.

Each Sunday morning, he said, most of his young people can be found in the worship service, and often he gives them an opportunity to conduct the services, realizing that it will develop church leadership.

Wallace Church has been the seed from which have sprouted many of Washington's greatest youth leaders, particularly in Christian Endeavor work.

Miss Frances Sangster, once president of the Wallace Endeavor Society, is now secretary to Dr. Daniel A. Poling, president of the World Christian Endeavor Union, and Frank McGeary and Josephine Davis are former District Christian Endeavor presidents, the latter being head of the District Endeavor Conference opening on Wednesday at Fredericksburg, Va.

An average of one Wallace member for each year of Dr. Hawthorne's ministry has entered the missionary or ministerial field. Eugene Allen, who conducted services last Sunday morning, is studying at Grace Theological Seminary, Winona Lake, Ind. Austin Higgins, member of the church session, is doing mountain missionary work in Kentucky.

REV. C. E. HAWTHORNE

William Armstrong and Harriet McGeary are senior and intermediate endeavor presidents, respectively. There also is a junior society. T. D. Tufts heads the Sunday school. His assistants are L. D. O'Flaherty, Leonard G. L. Naramore and L. C. Evans. Dr. Lawrence Klare is clerk of the session.

Dr. Hawthorne, who served as pastor in Albia, Iowa, before coming here, received his theological education at Xenia, Orlo and Tarkio, Mo. He served as president of the Washington Federation of Churches in 1937.

Services Once Held in Tent

The Wallace Memorial Church was organized in 1910 with 24 charter members. Then known as the Knox Memorial United Presbyterian Church, it held its first services in the small frame building at the corner of Varnum street and Georgia avenue northwest.

The following month the board of church extension purchased a building site near the present location, and services were begun in a tent. On May 21 United Presbyterian delegates to the World's Sabbath School Convention here held a reunion in the tent church home. A temporary building was dedicated on October 16, 1910.

The congregation progressed steadily under the leadership of the Rev. J. Alvin Campbell, pastor from 1911 until 1924. Ground was broken for the present edifice in January 1914, the cornerstone laid in April 5; and the building dedicated on March 7, 1915. An addition to the church plant was dedicated on September 2, 1926.

Doings of Youth Organizations

L. E. Hoover, jr., has been named president of the Sword and Shield Club, a newly formed youth organization at St. Paul's Lutheran Church.

Other officers are Willard Morris, first vice president; Mrs. Katherine Bartley, second vice president; Irving Hobson, treasurer; Mrs. Sally Dunlap, recording secretary, and Miss Patty Baker, corresponding secretary.

Committee chairmen are Ray Easterday, membership; Hazel Morris, dramatic, and Willard Morris, publicity. An outing will be held in Sligo Park on July 18.

Young people of the Sunday school are now engaged in an essay contest, winners of which will receive free enrollments to the summer school at Hood College during the latter part of July.

Young people of the National City Christian Church tomorrow at 7 p. m. will discuss the "Union Now" plan of Clarence K. Streit, with Stuart Russell as guest speaker. Miss Marion Price will preside.

The junior high department of the Emory Methodist Church school recently named the following officers: Carl Winkler, president; Doris Volland, vice president; Margaret Smith, secretary; Francer Garvin, commissioner of worship; Corrine Overby, commissioner of recreation; Helen Seals, commissioner of social service; Gene Nichols, commissioner of missions, and Robert Lambert, treasurer.

Word comes through the Christian Endeavor "grapevine" that a record delegation will attend the annual District of Columbia Christian Endeavor convention, being held from July 3 to 6, at Mary Washington College, Fredericksburg, Va.

Synod Elects Dr. Braskamp As Moderator

Dr. Wooding Named Vice Moderator Of Baltimore Area

Dr. Bernard Braskamp, pastor of Gunton-Temple Memorial Presbyterian Church, and Dr. Henry B. Wooding, pastor of Eckington Presbyterian Church, have been elected moderator and vice moderator of the Presbyterian Synod of Baltimore.

Their election took place at this week's sessions of the Baltimore Synod, embracing Washington City, Baltimore and New Castle Presbyteries, and held at Hood College, Frederick, Md.

Dr. Braskamp, who becomes spiritual leader of 48,000 communicants, including 188 ministers and 1,084 elders, has spent his entire ministry in the Nation's Capital since his graduation from Princeton Theological Seminary.

After two years as assistant to Dr. Charles Wood, then pastor of Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, Dr. Braskamp was called to the pastorate of the old Gurley Memorial Presbyterian Church, which, under his leadership, built a new edifice at Fourteenth and Meridian place northwest.

The Gurley Memorial and Gunton-Temple congregations merged in 1920, with Dr. Braskamp as leader of the united group. A $200,000 edifice later was erected at Sixteenth and Newton streets northwest.

Dr. Wooding, former moderator of the Washington City Presbytery, has served for 15 years as pastor of the Eckington Church.

German Bombers Raid Channel Islands, Demilitarized as 'Indefensible' by British

Other Planes Raid England and Wales; German Bases Hit

By the Associated Press

London, June 29 (Saturday).—German planes renewed the bombardment of Britain last night and early today.

The German air raiders struck at Southeast and Southwest England and at Wales early today after having killed 29 persons in bombing and machine-gunning England's Channel islands last night soon after a British announcement that those outposts near the French coast were to be demilitarized.

Heavy explosions were heard in Southeast England, antiaircraft guns and searchlights got busy in the Southwest and bombs were dropped in Wales apparently by a lone raider who made a hit-skip dash to that western region.

Many Hurt in Isles

The Home Office said 23 persons were killed and 36 injured by the raids on Guernsey and six were killed and several injured on Jersey. Property damage was heavy. Most civilians, along with all military forces and equipment, were removed from the islands secretly last week, it was disclosed last night.

The islanders (nearly 150,000 according to latest census figures) carried only light luggage, abandoning their crops and farm animals and shops filled with valuable stocks. Automobiles were left standing at the wharves.

Watchers on the southeast coast of England reported last night the sound of heavy explosions across the channel on the Nazi-held French coast, along with vicious antiaircraft fire, indicating that the British were continuing to harry German base-builders there.

The Channel islands, off the northwest coast of France, are the only portions of the Dukedom of Normandy still under the crown of Britain.

They have their own laws and their own customs, however. The principal officials are the crown-appointed lieutenant governors.

The population totals about 150,000. French is the official language. Mainly they are famous for Jersey, Guernsey and Alderney cattle.

Nazi Transport Sunk

The admiralty announced today the submarine Tetrarch had torpedoed and sunk a deeply laden German transport of 8,000 tons off the south coast of Norway.

The announcement said the Tetrarch was counterattacked by Nazi torpedo boats and planes but escaped.

The ministry of health announced that the "possibility of evacuation for military reasons of the bulk of civilian population of certain districts" of the British Isles is being considered.

The statement envisaging compulsory removal of civilians from areas threatened with invasion was made in a circular to authorities in London, Portsmouth and towns along the southern banks of the Thames estuary.

U. S. Guarding $1,000,000,000 Foreign Cash

The American Government is warden of more than $1,000,000,000 in funds of invaded countries, "frozen" to keep them for their rightful owners, information released by the Treasury yesterday indicated.

American banks, the Treasury disclosed, held $771,823,000 of cash belonging to the invaded European countries just before President Roosevelt placed restrictions on removal of such funds from the United States.

Since that time the amount has been swollen by flight of refugee funds to the United States, officials said.

Well Over a Billion

The figures released were as of April 3, and experts believed that funds entering here from abroad since that date had brought the present figure to well above $1,000,000,000.

As of April 3, French funds here totaled $290,706,000, Belgian $184,291,000, Danish $28,735,000, Dutch $199,676,000, and Norwegian $68,430,000. In addition, the President's order also immobilized several billion dollars of gold and securities owned by these countries and their citizens.

Funds of the invaded countries were part of a record total of $3,052,250,000 of short-term foreign bank deposits and similar funds held here by foreigners on April 3.

The Treasury also reported that transfers of cash funds to the United States offset securities withdrawals to produce a net inflow into the United States during March of $72,089,000, bringing the total inflow for the first three months of the year to $121,711,000.

The drain of war spending on foreign securities holdings here was reflected in figures showing net foreign liquidation of American securities in March totaling $7,227,000, a much smaller figure than in most of the other war months.

In March, British investors sold $15,278,000 worth, French $975,000, German $332,000, Italian $148,000, Canadian $888,000, and Asiatic $697,000 worth of American securities. These sales were partly offset by such purchases as $1,012,000 by the Netherlands, $8,413,000 by Switzerland, $1,009,000 by other European countries, and $818,000 by Latin America.

Rumania Appeals For German Aid

sure in Moscow to halt the Red advance and force the Russians to retire to the line named in their original, and accepted, demand.

All this was not the end of this unhappy country's troubles.

Budapest informants advised that while Hungarian official quarters were denouncing as "typical Rumanian gangsterism," published Rumanian reports of a Russian ultimatum to Hungary, a campaign against Rumania was opened in the officially inspired Hungarian press.

The papers there asserted that the Bucharest newspapers had published the story about a Russian ultimatum against Rumania only to alarm the Rumanian people "and make them think that other people are also in trouble."

Already, this countr yhas lost 4,000,000 people—one-fifth of her population—and one-fifth of its total area. Of these people, 80,000 are Germans.

Already, this country has lost pied surrendered sections of Rumania in a political conquest that may yet bring conflict between Germany and Russia.

They marched unopposed into Bessarabia and Northern Bucovina after King Carol's government had ceded those vital areas in yielding to Moscow's ultimatum, while German sources promised that the Nazis "definitely will settle things later on."

But, pending that, the move brought unrest to the entire European Southeast and Asia Minor.

Bulgaria mobilized. So did Hungary. Rumania balanced their moves on her side of the border, and Turkey moved her fleet through the Dardanelles to the Black Sea under a protective covering of aircraft.

German Legation sources here attributed the Russian move to a British plot designed to drive Germany into war on a new front, and declared that Germany would not permit this to come about now.

Nevertheless, they said that Carol's capitulation was only "a temporary adjustment."

They declared that Moscow had been egged on by Britain, at a time when Germany was preparing a decisive assault against the empire—that Sir Stafford Cripps, the British Ambassador to Moscow, had "pushed" Josef Stalin into Rumania.

The Reich would see to it eventually, they said in expressions of remarkable frankness, that the Russians were not permitted to dominate the mouth of the Danube and Northern Bucovina itself—because there lie potential geographic weapons against Germany.

King Carol, standing feverishly amidst what may be a progressive breakup of his little kingdom, put two Rumanian Nazis into the cabinet—Horia Sima and Ion Simonescue—and closed every place of gayety for an undeclared period of sorrow.

Johann Fabricius, the German Minister to Rumania, went to Vienna in a special airplane, apparently to get new instructions from Adolf Hitler, to whom Carol had appealed for help.

While Bulgaria and Hungary—both long insistent on certain Rumanian territory—called up troops, it was widely understood that Carol had let it be known that even with them he would be prepared to enter into negotiations "at a suitable moment."

Nevertheless, a great force of Rumanian fighting men stood in Transylvania, the rich agricultural area bordering Hungary, ready to fight if the Hungarians moved.

Bessarabia and northern Bucovina were won by Rumania in the great continental shuffle that followed the first World War.

Beat Allies Into Low Countries, Nazis Claim in Fifth White Book

By Frederick C. Oechsner,
United Press Staff Writer

Berlin, June 28.—The German Foreign Office tonight in its fifth White Book of the war—sought to justify Germany's invasion of Holland and Belgium with the claim that since September, 1939, Britain and France had planned to invade the Ruhr through the Low Countries.

The White Book comprises 19 documents said to have been captured by the Germans during the invasion of the Low Countries. The Germans allege that these documents not only prove the Allies intended to invade the Ruhr through Holland and Belgium, but disclose months'-long cooperation with the Belgian and Netherlands general staffs.

The Foreign Office, summarizing the facts allegedly proved by the White Book, said:

"Since the end of the World War general staff talks between Belgium and France were never broken off. The same holds good for cooperation between the Belgian and English general staffs. This long was known to the German army command through indisputable documentation.

"Prepared to Last Detail"

"The Belgian government in fact never avoided speaking quite unequivocally thereon in public. Similarly, intense military agreements were reached between the Netherlands government and Britain and France.

"Material captured by German troops during the advance through Belgium, whence today come the first documents published, shows irrefutably that an Anglo-French advance against Ruhr territory through Belgium and Holland had been prepared down to the last detail by enemy powers' general staffs.

"This was being done since September, 1939, and not only the general staffs but even fighting troops already had been made familiar with these orders in all details."

The White Book asserted that French army officers were in Belgium on reconnaissance prior to the German invasion and that several detachments of Allied troops were on Belgian soil before May 10.

British and French Maps

The White Book documents, although claimed to prove Allied intention in invade the Ruhr, actually contain no plans mentioning such an operation. It comprises mainly a series of British and French army orders issued prior to the German invasion of the Lowlands, apparently laying down the details of Allied action in the event of such a contingency.

Two of the documents are British and French maps purporting to show roads on which Allied troops would march into Belgium to take up positions there, as well as the prospective positions of Belgian troops.

"It is clear that such a plan of operations could only be worked out in understanding with the Belgian general staff," the German foreign office comment said.

The White Book contains a "confidential memorandum" of the Dutch commander in chief, dated March 23, 1940, to the Dutch minister in Brussels, outlining Dutch defense plans in cooperation with Belgium in the event of German invasion, indicating that France would be requested to send four divisions and Britain one division, plus planes, to assist in defense of the Netherlands.

Guns Replying To Peace Move, Germans Say

Berlin Professes Utter Calm Despite Events in Balkans

By Louis P. Lochner,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, June 28.—Iron talk from the mouth of cannon is Germany's answer to the latest flurry of peace rumors.

The Wilhelmstrasse tonight was cold to the suggestion of possible peace overtures from London.

Nazi spokesmen said the Reich hardly could take notice of unauthorized peace soundings at a time when the British government itself is categorically denying peace rumors and demanding a war to the finish.

"That is the war we are giving them," Nazi officials said. "The cannon are speaking."

The view was expressed that the peace rumors were started in England for the purpose of giving Prime Minister Churchill and other British leaders a chance to reject with vehemence any suggestion of peace.

In any case, it was emphasized, the only utterance to which Germany can attach any importance at the moment is the official British announcement that the British government is determined to continue the war until victory.

Official quarters also clung to a cool view of the Balkan events, insisting that Germany "has no fears" that the seizure of Bessarabia by Russia may spread the European conflict to Danubian lands.

Evening papers did not mention events in Rumania.

Military developments in the west were meager. The high command announced completion of Germany's seizure of the French western coast and the arrival of advance detachments at the Spanish border.

It acknowledged further British air raids against Germany and the German-held Dutch and Belgian coast yesterday and last night, and asserted Nazi planes had bombed armament plants and harbor facilities in southern and central England.

DNB, official news agency, reported that 43 persons were killed in a British bombing at Den Helder and other Dutch towns.

Nazi newspapers, commenting on the twenty-first anniversary today of the Versailles peace settlement, noted with satisfaction that that "criminal treaty" no longer carried weight in Europe.

De Gaulle Unit Denies It Aims To Rule France

Britain Recognizes General as 'Leader Of Free Frenchmen'

By Sidney J. Williams
United Press Staff Writer

London, June 28.—The French national committee, shortly after the British government had recognized Gen. Charles de Gaulle as "leader of all free Frenchmen," tonight issued a statement asserting that it is not and does not wish to become the government of France.

Sole object of the committee is to form a volunteer foreign legion to be backed by the British government, the statement said.

Formed by Gen. de Gaulle, the committee has been attempting to persuade the French colonies to fight on against the German and Italian forces.

Complete Break Avoided

Apparently fearful of the consequences of a complete break with the French government at Bordeaux, but anxious to rally resistance of the French empire overseas, Britain tonight recognized de Gaulle as leader only of the French outside France.

"Whatever happens in other parts of the orld, the French volunteer legion will go ahead, even if it is an isolated body of Frenchmen in Britain," the committee statement said.

It emphasized that it will continue to rally resistance in the French colonies despite reported cessation of hostilities in Syria, where there is an armed force of 500,000 men which it had been hoped would fight on alongside Britain.

Turkish Action Unlikely

De Gaulle, it was said, is experiencing difficulty in communicating and receiving replies from points of the French empire overseas.

[From Istanbul it was reported that no immediate Turkish action is expected as result of the announcement that Syria is giving up and is taking orders from the Bordeaux government.]

Diplomats here assured that the appreciable weakening of the French garrison in Syria might prompt the Turks to occupy the French colonial possession in order to forestall Italian action there.

The Cotton Problem

Speaking in Los Angeles yesterday before a gathering of farmers and representatives of the textile industry, Milo Perkins, Director of Marketing of the Department of Agriculture, discussed the problems that our cotton growers would face in a totalitarian world "where goods are bartered and price is not a determining factor."

The export subsidies to which the Department of Agriculture resorted about a year ago in order to move our high priced cotton into export channels might, as Mr. Perkins fears, prove impotent except in isolated cases, in the world of the future. Yet, he says, the cotton loan plan must be continued to assure a minimum price for producers, although it will "lead to eventual disaster unless we can move the cotton produced into consumption here and abroad."

If prices are kept above world levels by the loan policy, how can surplus cotton be kept from piling up, in view of our dependence upon export outlets? That question has confronted the country for a long time. For obvious reasons the Department of Agriculture prefers to stress the future dislocations that will result from the European conflict. So far war has greatly stimulated the export demand for cotton instead of cutting off outlets.

However, Mr. Perkins deserves credit for his courage in asking what we could do if the export market were lost entirely. The obvious answer is that we should have to limit production of cotton to domestic requirements. Mr. Perkins admits the ultimate necessity of doing so, but during the years of transition he envisages the possibility of raising the domestic consumption of cotton to 11,100,000 bales. That would be an increase of nearly 50 per cent above current consumption—and would far exceed the present manufacturing capacity of the cotton textile industry.

To permit the utilization of an additional 3,600,000 bales of cotton, Mr. Perkins suggests that cotton could be used in place of jute and burlap; the cotton stamp plan could be extended; and mattresses could be distributed to low-income families. "For my own part," he confessed, "I shudder somewhat at the administrative problems connected with a program of this magnitude, to say nothing of its cost."

Such misgivings are amply justified, for the estimated annual outlay for this huge subsidization program is placed at $644,000,000. And that figure does not include the "tens of millions" that could be paid out by industry to cover the extra cost of cotton bagging.

It is indicated that this costly plan would only be in force during a period of transition while cotton growers were being persuaded to cut down production and diversify production. But if such a lavish subsidization scheme were ever introduced the chances are that it would be saddled upon the country indefinitely. Our experience in recent years has shown that agricultural subsidies do not merely postpone, they actually prevent, the adjustments that must be made in order to put agriculture on a self-sustaining basis and lighten the burden of taxation resulting from unwise policies.

The Parking Survey

Automobile owners in the District will welcome the news that a city-wide survey of possible off-the-street parking facilities is soon to be undertaken. The study, authorized under the 1941 Appropriations Act, will be conducted jointly by the District Government and the Public Roads Administration.

Previous efforts to solve Washington's parking difficulties have come to nothing. The most noteworthy recent approach to the problem was the proposal of Representative Dirksen for Government-operated lots. This plan was rejected when it was found that land costs would make it necessary to charge 50 cents to $1.30 a day per car in the congested area. It would seem, therefore, that the new study must be broader if it is to succeed.

In the meantime, the trouble grows steadily worse. New Government buildings bring increasing numbers of commuters to the crowded areas. Streets that should be cleared for traffic are lined with parked vehicles. Ground formerly available for automobile storage is being occupied. The new survey can at least open the way to reserving some space in portions of the city that are not completely built up. If it can relieve present pressure by finding room on the fringe of the downtown area, or by any other means, it will have performed an inestimable service to the District.

Virtue Of Simplicity

Although the statement sounds somewhat paradoxical, it is nevertheless true that a complex problem can be handled best by a direct, straightforward and simple approach.

"Simple," in this connection, does not mean feeble, or ill-informed, or incompetent. It means the opposite of tricky, sly and superficially clever. A man whose thought processes follow the lines of simplicity may at the same time be shrewd, alert and a very good judge of men. In fact, the simple man is more likely to possess these characteristics because he is never bemused by his own smartness.

America has been fortunate, in different crises of its history, in finding simple men who proved themselves extremely competent to handle the complex problems of their day. And it has been equally fortunate that the democratic system, which does not always operate intelligently, has so often demonstrated ability to select the simple man for posts of great responsibility at precisely those moments when the virtue of simplicity was most essential.

Washington was a simple man, and so was Jefferson. Another of the same direct, straightforward habit of thought was Abraham Lincoln, a figure whose heroic simplicity of character has been caught and depicted in imperishable marble in the great statue which every visitor to this city knows. The same simplicity underlay the very different personality of Robert E. Lee. Indeed it was the clash between the conflicting objectives of these fundamentally kindred temperaments which makes, and will always make, the Civil War a subject of absorbing interest.

Now the name and character of another simple man has caught and is holding the public interest. For, whatever his other qualifications, and whatever his deficiencies, there is the quality of simplicity in Wendell Willkie.

This is not to say that the Republican candidate for the Presidency is another Washington or Lincoln. The basic quality of simplicity does not of itself insure greatness, as all of us have learned from Gray's Elegy. Most of the simple folk, indeed, prefer to live "far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife." But not infrequently some irresistible urge forces them, without doing violence to their essential quality, to give battle in the arena. Such men are always worth watching, and Wendell Willkie is one of them.

He is worth watching not merely as a candidate who has demonstrated ability to wage a truly electrifying campaign, but even more as a man who candidly affirms that there is no miraculous solution, no painless panacea, no easy shortcut around the grievous and growing difficulties of democracy. This is indeed a novelty for a public which during the past seven years has become weary of unfulfilled, because unfulfillable, assurances to the contrary.

So far as the general public knows the simplicity of Wendell Willkie has as yet been tested in only one major undertaking of public life. But it is noted that at the Philadelphia convention all the old political maneuvers, all the strategems and combinations, all the bag of tricks traditionally dear to the stalwarts of the G. O. P., availed these professional politicians nothing. And there is no doubt that the imagination of the country has been captured by the direct and wholly unpretentious approach of this complete amateur.

For all the effort expended, it is only the first hurdle which Mr. Willkie has as yet taken. Some which are much more tricky lie ahead. The Republican candidate may lose his footing, may change his pace, may fail adequately to estimate the factors of height and distance.

But there is also reason to believe that he will not make many major errors in the race now starting. For simplicity usually means sureness. It usually means that a man does not attempt something which he is not qualified to finish. And it usually means, when the race is political, that a very large number of the electorate will rally to a contestant when his character is demonstrably one which inspires confidence and trust.

To Clarify A Point

An editorial entitled "A Haphazard Process," which appeared in the June 24 issue of The Post, has been misinterpreted in some quarters. That editorial was critical of the hit-or-miss procedure by which District legislation is enacted. It made no direct reflection upon any member of Congress handling local bills and certainly no indirect reflection was intended.

As The Post has frequently pointed out, Washington is indebted to many hard-working members of the District committees in both the Senate and House for the time and effort which they devote to local bills. Such men as Senators King, Overton and Capper, Representatives Dirksen, Randolph and Kennedy render invaluable service to the District. Small groups in both chambers, including these and a few other legislators, keep the makeshift government of the District operating as smoothly as could be expected under the present set-up.

In calling attention to the fact that a number of bills slipped through the House and Senate last week without consideration on their merits or demerits, The Post did not say that the District committees had been negligent. We pointed out that these bills had been analyzed by the committees. It was only on the floors of the two houses that they were disposed of with perfunctory approval.

Of course, these bills had been thoroughly studied. The District Commissioners and the Budget Bureau as well as the District committees of both the House and Senate had put them in shape for enactment. The point we attempted to make was not that affairs of the District are being recklessly handled, but that it is unreasonable to force petty municipal measures through the bottleneck of Congress. Many District bills which have the approval of all the local and national authorities directly concerned with the welfare of the Capital frequently fail only because they are caught in the log-jam of national legislation.

Friends of the District in Congress have tried earnestly to correct this anomalous situation by giving the community a larger measure of home rule. Their efforts have come to naught. The local community is in a sorry predicament, despite the conscientious efforts of many individual legislators, because Congress as a whole has failed to give it a government that can promptly and effectively respond to the needs of a large modern city.

Russia And The Danube

With the addition, at the point of the bayonet, of part of the Rumanian province of Bukovina, Russia has, for the first time since she embarked on her current policy of imperialistic aggression, spread beyond her pre-World War frontiers.

Bessarabia was Russian territory between 1878 and 1918 although Rumanians form and have always formed a very considerable percentage of its mixed population. Bukovina, however, was never before under Russian rule. Before it was annexed by the Rumanian kingdom in 1918 it was ruled by Austria and had been under Austrian rule for a century and a half.

The excuse given by Premier Molotoff in demanding the cession of Northern Bukovina is that this would be partial compensation "for the tremendous damage inflicted on the Soviet Union and the population of Bessarabia by 22 years of Rumanian domination in Bessarabia." The real reason for the high-handed grab of territory to which the Soviet Union could lay no legitimate claim is strategic.

The Russian thrust into the Balkans is clearly designed to secure the land and river approaches to the Black Sea. The seizure of Bessarabia is a step in that direction. So, also would be the establishment of Russian naval bases at Constanta, on the Black Sea, and Tulcea, near the mouth of the Danube. But by no means of least importance is the Russian occupation of Bukovina. That region, lying south of the Carpathians and west of the Transylvanian Alps, offers an easy approach from Russian-occupied Poland to Bucharest and the Danube.

Under the circumstances, the Russian coup against Rumania must be decidedly displeasing to Hitler, regardless of whether the latter was informed of the move in advance or not. Indeed, German legation quarters in Bucharest are bitter over Russia's action and declare openly that Germany will not permanently permit the Bolsheviks to enjoy their latest territorial gains. Sooner or later, a showdown between the partners of the Moscow-Berlin axis over this question of Danube control is inevitable, for the Third Reich cannot view with equanimity permanent control or domination of the lower Danube by the Soviet Union.

Envy The Animals

New Orleans' Audubon Park has forbidden jitterbugs. They kept the animals awake.

Here is another instance of man's humanity to animals, which stands out in contrast to his inhumanity to man. Even in Russia, a zoo attendant was brought to trial on a charge that he annoyed the captive beasts and birds with loud music. It is true that he also was accused of eating the bear, but such an offense presumably was condemned only as destruction of public property. The main point seems to be that animals must not be subjected to some punishments which man must endure.

Soon after the blitzkrieg in Poland began, the director of Germany's famous Hagenbeck Zoological Gardens in Hamburg made arrangements to ship many of his animals to Russia—possibly to get them away from the war of nerves. The London Zoo sent a sea lion to Washington for the duration, but most Londoners had to stay and take their medicine.

If the trend continues, there will be a revolution. One of these hot nights Washingtonians, kept awake by wailings and stampings of other Washingtonians, will march to the city's animal sanctuary and invade the quiet pool of Snowy, the polar bear.

So often yawning is the act of opening your mouth because someone else won't close his.

There wasn't much crooning done in the days when the audience was in tomato-throwing distance of the crooner.

For A Change Of Policy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "The Government of the United States does not recognize"—a more dignified formula ought to be found. We do not "recognize" the regime in Manchukuo, or in Ethiopia, "changes brought about by force" in Europe, or in China. But force moves the machinery of history, and at the rate it is grinding we shall soon find most of the face of the earth "unrecognizable" upon principles we now adhere to.

It would be better to take satisfaction in recognizing events as they happen, boldly stigmatizing them for what they are from our viewpoint. Then frankly we might direct ourselves toward such action (or inaction) as our interests, principles and power might allow. "Shirtsleeve" diplomacy is about to be outmoded by something tougher.

Sound Judgment Needed

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Thank you for your clear cut, June 21 editorial, "Horror As Yet Unveiled" which ends, "If there is any real statesmanship left anywhere in the world this final assault on the inner substance of European civilization will be averted."

In a recent address by Dr. Bowman, president of Johns Hopkins, he stated that the cause and cure of this world crisis is an active challenge to every thinking person. Public opinion is a powerful current of influence exerting accumulating pressure on those at the top. This is a time when those who contribute to it should do so with great judgment or else remain spectators only. Emotionalism and snap judgment cloud the national vision and bespeak ignorance. Hitler's Donkey

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the mythology and fables of the ancients there are many lessons of wisdom, wit and humor. These lessons are often parallels of conditions existing today.

According to Aesop, an ass desiring spectacular notoriety broadcast a report among all subjects of the animal kingdom that he had kicked a lion.

But when it was learned the lion was a dead one, there was boisterous hilarity among the beasts, birds and reptiles.

Hitler's donkey, Bonito, recently brayed loud and long about the "great victory" in Ethiopia. Now, this same donkey's discordant bray is heard again as he gallops upon Europe's battlefield to be in at the "death." Hitler's donkey has kicked a lion; but the lion was dead!

Prayer For France

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: God bless poor France.

May He, in His mercy, not be too harsh on her people.

May her people retain their tools and their implements; their fields and their vineyards; their shops and their homes.

May virtue and integrity once more reign in place of deceit.

May she smile and laugh again but not with the wanton's smile.

Hemisphere Defense

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: An effort is being made by our Government to prevent the spread of totalitarianism in Central and South America through economic pressure from Europe. Various schemes have been advanced, most of which center around the idea of our controlling the disposal of agricultural and mineral products of these countries by some American pool. I am afraid that this will not work.

Anyone who understands Latin-American psychology will dismiss the idea that these countries will place their economy in foreign hands merely in furtherance of a principle. Regardless of statements to the contrary, the peoples to the south are well stratified. The principle of equality of all the citizens in the state is repugnant to those in power or privilege, and does not engage the thoughts or aspirations of the others. Most elements in the populations are infertile soil for the propagation of such an ideal. Any workable scheme must have a paying basis.

As economic dependency is the handmaid of political dominance, it behooves us to address ourselves assiduously to the solution of this problem. In the meantime, we should prepare ourselves militarily for the struggle. This country should take over, si et armis, all the sites strategically important to a defense of this hemisphere.
RUSSELL BENSON.

Against Oppression

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Not being a member of Jehovah's Witnesses nor being in agreement with their beliefs, I feel that I can view the Rockville episode dispassionately. Wednesday night the Montgomery County police permitted a grave violation of constitutional rights.

The world seems to be plagued with oppression fed by bitterness. Principle must be the guide for all action and thinking persons must exercise the Golden Rule if these manifestations of aggressive error are not to continue.

Inadequate Defense

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Hitler is a modest fellow despite the fact he is a thief. He has laughed up his sleeve many a time at Uncle Sam, the self-appointed defender of the Western Hemisphere, whose defenses are comparable with the toy armaments of war left by Santa Claus in the stocking of the German boys rather than with the armaments of war maintained by the German nation.

Get A New Stick

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Although the Rome-Berlin Axis is a brotherhood of thieves, I would suggest that Uncle Sam speak more softly about this axis, until such time as it may take him to replace the nigh-rotted stick with a radiant nonbreakable ultra modern whaling rod.

Sensitive Elephant

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There seems to be new corroboration of the idea that the elephant is the most keenly sensitive of animals. The largest one in the Philadelphia Zoo died the day the Republican convention opened there. He simply couldn't take it.

For Negro Hospitals

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Thirteen millions of Negro Americans stand in dire need of adequate hospitalization in every city of the United States where there is a large Negro population, particularly in the South, where over 10,000,000 Negroes live.

Now that the Federal Government is considering a $60,000,000 hospital building program, at the rate of $10,000,000 a year for six years, as founder and executive secretary of the National Negro Hospital Foundation, Inc., I wish to call attention to the pressing need for up-to-date Negro hospitals throughout the country to provide adequate hospitalization of the Negro sick, and training and practice for Negro physicians and nurses.

According to the provisions of the bill which has already passed the Senate, the hospitals are to be built and equipped by the Federal Government and leased to States or communities making application for them. It matters not how many hospitals are built and leased to States and communities, the status of the Negro physicians and nurses in them all will remain unchanged from what it is today. It matters not what the qualifications of a Negro physician might be, when his patient needs hospitalization he has to surrender him to other physicians.

After talking with hospital administrators in 170 cities throughout the 48 States of the Union who told me frankly that the time would not soon come when Negro physicians and nurses will practice medicine and nursing side by side with white physicians and nurses in the public hospitals of the country, I have come to the conclusion that Negro physicians and nurses will get opportunities for training and practice only in Negro hospitals. If, therefore, the Negro race is to be benefited by a hospital building program such as the Federal Government is about to undertake, there will have to be established at strategic points Negro hospitals which will provide training and practice for Negro physicians and nurses.

The hospital administrators with whom I have talked assured me that if and when hospitals for Negroes are established throughout the country, the greatest medical leaders in those communities could be counted upon to cooperate in serving on the staffs to assist in training Negro physicians and nurses to minister to the health needs of their own people in their own hospitals. There is no section of the country where the hospital and medical leaders do not feel the acute need for modern Negro hospitals.

On June 24, meeting at the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, the National Board of Trustees of the National Negro Hospital Foundation, Inc., recommended that at least one 100-bed hospital be established each year for six years in the South, to be used for the training of Negro physicians and nurses so that they may be competent to grapple with the deplorable health problems of their own people. This would be the greatest and most far-reaching service that the Federal Government could render to the Negro race at this time.

The Post Impressionist

The Invasion Of England

At Pont de Briques, some 2 miles out of Boulogne, and a little back from the great highroad between that city and Paris, lies a small and very charming suburban villa. It was in this peaceful setting, throughout the summer of 1805, that the Emperor Napoleon had his headquarters; here, at a desk in one of the quiet rooms, he perfected his plans for the invasion of Britain. Nearby, at Boulogne, lay the great bulk of the Grand Army, the veterans of Marengo and Rivoli; at anchor in the harbor swung a vast flotilla of flat-bottomed boats collected from all along the coast, waiting to ferry them across the Channel. Similar concentrations of troops and shipping had been effected at half a dozen other Channel ports.

Nothing was wanting now for the signal to begin the passage but the appearance of Villeneuve, the French admiral, with the combined fleets of France and Spain. For although the war was one in which Spain had only a lukewarm interest Bonaparte had succeeded in forcing Don Manuel de Godoy, that egregious adventurer who controlled Spanish diplomatic policy, to align his country's naval forces with those of the French. Together the two fleets would make a formidable show of strength.

"Let us be masters of the Channel for six hours," promised the Emperor, "and we are masters of the world." As the long summer days passed, as June slipped into July, he waited with mounting impatience, gazing impotently at the white cliffs across the narrow stretch of water. On every hilltop along the coast officers were stationed with powerful glasses, watching for the sails of the missing fleet.

"I had given orders," the Emperor afterwards told Doctor O'Meara, the physician who attended him at St. Helena, "for two fleets to proceed to the West Indies. Instead of remaining there, they were merely to show themselves among the islands, and return directly to Europe, raise the blockade of Ferrol, take the ships out and proceed to Brest, where there were about 40 sail of the line, unite and sail to the Channel, where they would not have met with anything strong enough to engage them, and clear it of all English men-of-war. By false intelligence, adroitly managed, I calculated that you would have sent squadrons to the East and West Indies and Mediterranean in search of my fleets. Before they could return I would have had command of the Channel for two months, as I should have had about 70 sail of the line, besides frigates. I would have hastened over my flotilla with 200,000 men, landed as near Chatham as possible, and proceeded direct to London, where I calculated to arrive in four days from the time of my landing."

000

The first part of the plan worked quite according to schedule. Villeneuve slipped out of Toulon and at Cadiz was joined by a Spanish squadron under Gravina; then, together, the two fleets sailed for the French West Indies, with Nelson and the British giving chase. As Napoleon had calculated also, the British admiral spent considerable time in a futile search for the Allied fleets off Trinidad. And when he put in at Barbados, at last, and discovered that they had given him the slip they were already halfway across the Atlantic.

But unfortunately for the success of the Emperor's plan Villeneuve, apparently failed to understand that time was the essential factor. Had a juncture of all French and Spanish naval forces been effected while the British were still split up with Nelson in the West Indies and Collingwood at Gibraltar, the Emperor might well have had control of the Channel by the end of June. But instead of making all haste to carry out his assignment Villeneuve delayed to follow and capture any chance merchantmen which crossed his path. By the time he sighted Finisterre Nelson had rejoined Collingwood at Gibraltar and reinforcements had arrived for Calder who was blockading Ferrol. Though the action which followed was not decisive—it was fought in a heavy fog—Calder succeeded in capturing two Spanish vessels and when he sailed off next day with his prizes Villeneuve made no attempt to renew the battle. Instead he retired upon Vigo and some days later entered Ferrol. From there in spite of an exasperated letter which he received from the Emperor, he sailed not for Brest, but southward to Cadiz. He was to emerge from that landlocked harbor only to meet Nelson at Trafalgar.

It was about 4 o'clock in the morning of August 13 and still quite dark when a mounted courier came spurring up the road to the quiet little villa at Pont de Briques. There was a brief colloquy with the sentries, then the officer on duty arrived to escort him to the house.

Someone hurried to arouse the Emperor. There in the darkness of early morning they told him the news: Villeneuve had turned back on Ferrol. The great plan had been bungled.

He sent for Daru; the latter when he came found the Emperor fully dressed, with his hat jammed down hard over his eyes. He was pacing up and down the room furiously, before a desk littered with papers—the accumulated notes and memoranda on the projected invasion. Daru reports that the Emperor swore steadily for a long time, with much feeling.

"Old Lizzie"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since the elephant is the symbol of the G. O. P. it was rather pathetic that Old Lizzie, the elephant at the Philadelphia Zoo, should have died right at the height of the Republican Convention.

No official notice of her demise was taken by the delegates, nor funeral arrangements announced. Perhaps they are waiting for the 5th of November for the final obsequies.

The Faceless Men

By Dorothy Thompson

After The Convention

ATTENDING THE Republican convention was one of the strangest experiences of my life. I sat in the convention hall, and as I listened and watched, and as I sat with delegates and overheard snatches of conversation I felt moments of black despair. Let us speak to each other with candor, as between friends. I did not like some of what I saw and overheard.

Day by day and hour by hour there is being telegraphed to us news of a human world whose face is being destroyed. The world is being destroyed by faceless men, possessed with unhuman weapons, trained to unhuman exploits. What we are seeing is a war against mankind in the truest and most prophetic sense of the word. It is not that men's bodies are being killed. That is the least of it. We all shall die some time, whether by a bomb or by diabetes or cancer. The body of man is mortal. It is unfortunate that our education does not remind us constantly of that prime reality.

But in this terrible war against mankind the soul of man is being destroyed. This is no war with ordinary weapons. It is not even describable as a war with the extraordinary weapons of modern science and mechanics. It is a war waged with every form of wickedness. It is a war in which every human instinct, every God-like urge in men is being perversely exploited for his own undoing that man should be eliminated from this earth and give way to the faceless.

It is diabolical, in the exact sense of the word. It began with terror against one race, which has now become the vicarious symbol of the whole race of humans. It has taken the genius of the Twentieth Century, the genius that can pull down fire from heaven for the service of mankind, and it has used it to destroy mankind. It has exploited as though they were contemptible weaknesses every human ideal. The ideal of peace has been, and is being, used to disarm the world that the world may become its prey. The faceless preach abroad wherever they have the word, nothing but peace. They exalt peace, and by that very exaltation make it into something contemptible. Thus the soul becomes divided and sick. Our belief in peace, our belief that war is evil, becomes shaken as we see the peaceful exterminated, and evil ride high and successful. Thus we are driven to the point where we no longer know what we believe. And that is the beginning of the disintegration of the spirit.

THE IDEAL of race is so demeaned that one loses one's racial pride. Who is not proud of his race? Am I not proud of my Anglo-Saxon forebears who did some things in their way for which the greater race of man may be grateful? Of the dim ancestor who collaborated with others in making the King James version of the Bible and thus transferring to themselves, barbarians of the North, the wisdom of Greek and Hebrew texts? But today one shudders to use the word "race," lest one be allied with the persecutors or the persecuted with the supermen who have lost their faces, or with the subhumans whose faces are a print of fear. Should not one be proud to be a German of the stock of Goethe and of Luther, of the race which possesses, perhaps of all races in Europe, the most universal imagination? But the pure-hearted German hardly dares mention it for he flinches to see his neighbor flinch.

THE FACELESS have made into an almost exact science the black religion of the disintegration of the soul. They have studied and made into a precise technique the myriad ways in which men can be rendered afraid—the employe afraid of his employer, the employer afraid of his workers, the woman afraid of the man, the man afraid of the woman, the Aryan afraid of the Jew, the Jew afraid of the Aryan, the individual afraid of the mass, the mass afraid of the individual, leadership afraid of the people, and the people afraid of leadership.

Thus is mankind looted of its freedom. Man is robbed of it in his own soul. For who is free? Only he who is without fear. If he is afraid for his dividends, he is very craven and very basely enslaved; if he is afraid for his life, he is living in illusion, for his life is on lease and the lease will most certainly expire; but if he is afraid of his neighbor, he lives in panics, and cannot hold his head erect.

Listen! In Europe this spring and summer I saw faces, human faces. On them I saw only one look: Fear. It was not fear of the enemy across some no-man's-land. It was fear of the comrade at one's own side! What was his comrade thinking? To what secret party or bund or cult might his comrade belong? If he lay asleep in the night at his comrade's side, whose bayonet might be driven into his breast? Thus, before men could stand together, they must lock their neighbors into concentration camps!

The title of the above description is how to lose a war or how to lose a peace.

IN EUROPE I talked with people—all sorts and conditions of people, in many countries. When they spoke of "America" something happened to those fear-stricken faces. A light came into them. Do you know what they think of America in Europe? They do not talk about our prosperity; they do not talk about our great natural resources; they do not mention the Ford plant, the du-Pont works, the George Washington Bridge, the Grand Canyon or Niagara Falls. America to them is a dream; a sort of earthly heaven; a kingdom of God—because they believe it is a place where no man is afraid of another. You have a long border and not a fort on it, they say. "That is a miracle of God." All sorts of races live together in America, and you do not kill and persecute each other. They say, "That is a miracle of God."

America, beautiful, that is true, and that is your destiny, to create a world where men are not afraid of each other. Just that and nothing more. Just that and everything else will follow. But at a public school in New York a fortnight ago, gangs of big boys were taking Jewish children one by one and stripping them and putting their heads in the toilet. Yes, America, beautiful, here, in New York. And on our ships, captains are afraid of their crews—and crews are afraid of their captains. And among our big men of industry there are those who are saying, "My, but I bet wrong on this war. The Allies are going to lose, and what of our investments over there?"

And the faceless come oozing in to them and say, "How about it, boys, want to make a deal?"

Which leads me to the Republican Convention. (Have patience. I am getting around to the point).

It was scared.

And because it was scared, not a single honest, truthful, brave, uplifting word came out of that convention to a waiting, palpitating world. Mush-mouth words and mealy-mouthed words. I saw Frank Gannett's headquarters' sign: "Vote for Gannett and defeat the New Deal." (How scared you must be, Mr. Gannett. The New Deal is dead. You are mobilizing against a corpse? You are afraid of ghosts). A platform, neatly carpentered of the usual planks designed to capture the labor vote, the farm vote, the rich man's vote, the poor man's vote . . . designed to keep us out of war and leave it open for us to make a deal . . . designed to get us all the armaments we may need without their costing anyone anything. Designed on the assumption that the way to keep people calm is to soothe them with fairy stories.

Listen, convention, the American people have come of age. We are grown up. We know what's what. We're not afraid of Europe, of ships coming over across the sea, of parachutists dropping into Brooklyn. We are only afraid of the type of mind that thinks you mustn't mention certain things because if you do you will anger the Devil. Did you ever hear the phrase, "Tell the truth and shame the Devil? Or the one, "Know the truth, and the truth will set you free?"

We are past recrimination and name-calling, and rubbing one forefinger on another and crying, "Shame, shame, double shame." That doesn't get us anywhere. We know that, at long last. But we aren't falling for the success story either. And don't any of you put my money on it, if you have any of it in your corporations. I'm selling it short. I've been reading your own advertisements. You don't base confidence on fear.

WENDELL WILLKIE was nominated, although hardly anyone in that convention wanted him, at first. The people of America nominated Wendell Willkie. It was a tidal wave.

Was he nominated on the wave of "Let's be realists and make a deal?" Was he nominated on the wave of "we had better adjust ourselves to Hitler's world, as the surest way of keeping out of war?"

(Oh, America, learn from others. There is no security except in yourself. There is no security except in your own free soul. Do nothing, America, that insults your soul. If you do, you will surely die.)

Or was he nominated on that other wave: "Save America! Save her for the destiny for which she was born; save her as the New World, the world where nobody is afraid of his neighbor; where neither for the love of riches nor the fear of poverty shall we make compromise with our mission."

I think it was the latter wave that carried him to the candidacy. I believe that is the wave on which he will ride. I believe it, because I know him, and have heard him say the things that so desperately need to be said. The things that are said with the soul as well as with the mind.

But they will make it hard for you, Wendell Willkie. The men who want to defeat something or other more than they want to save America. The men who are bringing the faceless ones into our midst. They are all for you, now, Wendell Willkie—the men who hold up the Christian cross and make it into a symbol of fear; the men who marry the cross to the swastika, in unholy union. They speak in the name of Jesus of Nazareth and plan his crucifixion.

They do not read the words of the One whose name they take in vain. They do not remember that He said, "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto Me."

Do not let them make your standard into a standard of terror and fear, Wendell Willkie.

We have great hopes of you.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Incoherent Bray

Philadelphia, June 28.

THIS HAS NOT been the noisiest convention of the Republicans, who are by nature less raucous than the Democrats, but, even so, the clatter of mechanized oratory, followed by mechanized eruptions of passionate enthusiasm for impersonal names of absent persons, has degraded rather than adorned the occasion. It makes confusion; most of the speeches and practically all of the outbursts of joy and loyal spirit are crudely artificial, and the purposes of the occasion would be better achieved if the leaders and managers should realize that the United States is no longer a raw-boned nation which chews tobacco in bed.

Such antics were natural when the country was younger, but they are forced and phony now, and they interfere with the business of the meeting. The delegates are swamped by the spectators, and there is absolutely no pretense that the men and women with the badges who actually constitute the convention in the formal sense have the slightest voice in the real business of an event which, after all, has some important duties.

BECAUSE TRADITION says it is customary for delegates to act the clown in the aisles and struggle around the floor, yowling and sprinkling sweat over their fellows in a tawdry imitation of a football snake dance in certain circumstances, the delegates continue to do it.

Always there are among them a few country cuties who are proud of their legs and willing to be boosted to the shoulders of the county attorney and peel their teeth in ersatz Hollywood grins in the hope that photographers will be about. Invariably a few male baboons will get into fist fights for possession of their State standards, knowing the cops will break it up ere they get hurt.

But these disorders are entirely unnecessary, and the whole deportment of the national party convention in both camps is antiquated and stupid under present conditions.

IT IS SAFE to say that there is not a single human being inside or out of the asylums from San Diego to Eastport who could sincerely bounce out of his chair hollering: "Yowl" or "Yippee!" at mere mention of the name of Frank Gannett, Robert Taft or Tom Dewey. Not more than ten could so respond to the name of Wendell Willkie, and they would be deluded aristocrats who think he wants to reduce their taxes. Yet these conventions must be reduced to humiliating farce—the more embarrassing under the eyes of the Germans who are watching to note whether we are showing signs of sense merely because long ago Americans bawled and misbehaved by way of showing that they were free.

A few speeches contain some meaning, but nominating addresses almost invariably are noisy—meant only to cue off the faithful into silly disorders which confuse and delay the proceedings and give the United States bad publicity abroad. The legitimate business of a convention to nominate a man for President of the United States could be accomplished in less than half the time ordinarily devoted to it and should be so conducted that delegates at least appear to know what goes on. As it is, the platform of the party is arranged in private by a few individuals whom the delegates don't even know by name, and the candidates trade blocks of delegates in dealings far from the hall, and that is called a convention.

TO COVER THIS procedure the old absurdities are maintained and exaggerated, and explosions of spontaneous approval are juiced up by the band, under orders telephoned from the platform, and timed by recorders in the press. Worse, they are now measured for volume and pitch on a strange device, and the delegates of each persuasion feel a duty to howl longer and louder than their neighbors under pledge or invoice to some other total stranger.

The false note began with the custom of timing the demonstrations. No honest outburst could possibly go more than ten minutes, but the delegates are given to feel that they are letting down the people's choice if they quit when they are yelled out, so, assisted by planted rooters in the gallery, they stamp and holler far beyond honest and dignified limits.

So the incoherent bray of the microphone and senseless disorder on the floor have come to represent the deliberations of the parties, and the newspapers are the only means by which anyone, including the delegates themselves, can learn what goes on.

If it were good oratory and good cheering that would be something, though I can't say what.

Faith In America

G. O. P. Turns Thoughts Homeward

ENTIRELY APART from the candidate selected and the platform adopted, the Republican National Convention has performed a signal and significant service for the American people. It has turned their attention from events overseas to concentrate thought on those vital problems which are within our own control.

For a week now newspapers and radio have been more concerned with the struggle in Philadelphia than with that still raging in Europe. There has been far more interest in the progress and future prospects of Wendell Willkie's blitzkrieg than in that waged by Adolf Hitler. One need not be an isolationist, nor in the slightest degree indifferent to the cosmic importance of the European war, to be glad that this is the case.

There are many who believe that by and large this country has been far too apathetic about the origins, development and presumable outcome of the struggle in Europe. Publicists of this persuasion have had their day in court, and every facility of communication to present their viewpoint at inordinate length. The time is now ripe to emphasize that the real threat to our system of government emanates from apathy or indifference to events at home.

II

The defeatists in the camp of democracy are not those who say that the United States should avoid active participation in this war, regardless of which side is winning. Much more defeatist are those who argue that if Great Britain loses, as France has lost, America is thereby automatically all but doomed.

If we harbor a "fifth column" of active sympathizers with totalitarian doctrine, there is also in our midst a large detachment which exhibits painfully little confidence in the strength of our own, indigenous, political philosophy. That is virtually admitted by all who assert there is no hope for western civilization if Nazi Germany wins.

It is, of course, wholly reasonable to say that the British navy constitutes the first line of American defense, and that no American can in consequence afford indifference to the fate of that fleet. But it is equally reasonable to insist that the future of our democracy depends not so much on what happens to British sea power as on what happens to our own national power, naval, military and above all moral. If that is destroyed, partly by the false emphasis of those who seem to regard America as nothing more than a spiritual colony of western Europe, then the case is really desperate.

The greatest danger to America today is not Nazi doctrine, Nazi agents, nor Nazi strength. It is intellectual and emotional indifference, cultivated by many who think they are patriots but are essentially expatriates, to the traditions, the present significance and the manifest destiny of their own country.

It has been the very notable contribution of the current Republican National Convention to make this distinction more clear. And all those who have witnessed, listened-in or read about its sessions must have been impressed, and should have been encouraged, by the vitality of the faith in the American idea which was exhibited this week in Philadelphia.

III

OF COURSE there has been some nonsense in the formal speeches. There has been the usual surfeit of petty politics in committee meetings and around the headquarters of the various aspirants. There has been much childish buffoonery and many noisy demonstrations in which the wires that pulled the puppets were only too painfully obvious.

The platform which has been adopted is certainly not immune from criticism for inconsistencies, deficiencies and evidences of unfair partisanship. But in the months ahead it will get all the caustic criticism it deserves.

The candidate who has been selected after a bitter, hard-fought struggle, although a man of very unusual stature, quality and intellectual courage, is certainly not the superman painted in convention oratory. But with the humility which is a characteristic of real ability he has already entered the appropriate disclaimers on this score.

When all discounts for exaggerations have been made, however, they boil down to a statement that this nominating convention, in a period of unusual national strain, has exhibited the foibles as well as the faith of democracy. The foibles are in reality a part of that faith. A system of government based on confidence in the common man naturally and properly exhibits the common shortcomings of humanity.

Let us remember, in this connection, that "common" means customary rather than degraded. That which is common in the democratic way of life, like kindliness and friendliness and tolerance for the opinions of others, is not for that reason contemptible.

We are still somewhat affected, and this also we should remember, by using in a democracy words which in their original environment carried a snobbish and unpleasant meaning. "Common" is one example and "upstart" is another. The latter word still conveys an aristocratic sense of contempt for one who aspires to rise by his own efforts from a plebeian origin. But Abraham Lincoln was an upstart. Wendell Willkie is another. And at this convention the G. O. P. showed healthy realization that it needs more "upstarts" and more concern over what "common" people think.

IV

THE REPUBLICAN National Convention of 1940 deserves acclaim. It deserves it for the spirit of jumbled fraternity which has been so obvious in the streets and hotels of Philadelphia this week. It deserves it for the stumbling but sincere effort to build a party platform which, despite compromise and weakness, maintains complete fidelity to the essential spirit of democracy at a time when democracy needs faithful adherents.

The convention deserves acclaim for the skillful but never treacherous efforts to swing delegates from the camp of one aspirant to that of a rival. It deserves acclaim for the heroic and successful attack on the Maginot Line of organization and professional politics which was made by Mr. Willkie with the aid of a volunteer army of earnest workers. It deserves acclaim for the hard-fought bitterly-contested, but in the end truly unanimous selection of a singularly well-qualified candidate.

But most of all this convention deserves acclaim for its abundant evidence of faith in America's future, in American institutions and in the American way of life.

Events in Europe unquestionably affect, and will continue profoundly to affect, the future of the United States. But the way to counter the forces now unleashed is not to say that our frontiers lie somewhere in the Old World; that our security depends on the fate of other nations; that our system of government must become totalitarian in order to resist totalitarianism.

The challenge of the times must be met in our own national way, appreciating and not depreciating our national idiosyncracies. This challenge can best be confronted by reaffirming, with more understanding, more seriousness of purpose, more self-criticism and more faith, the distinctive ideals of America. After all it is these ideals which have guided the Nation in its rise to a position of vital importance in the long history of civilization.

By and large, it is in this way that the Republican National Convention confronted and met the highly responsible task which fell to its lot this week.

Triumph Of Reality

By Mark Sullivan

People's Man Wins

Philadelphia, June 28.

IT WAS A TRIUMPH of reality over phoniness. The reality was that the people wanted Mr. Willkie. The phoniness was the presumed handicaps that stood in his way. Mr. Willkie must not be nominated because he had been a Democrat—that was phony baloney. Mr. Willkie must not be nominated because he was "a public utility man." That was phony two ways. First, Mr. Willkie was not a public utility man—he was a young lawyer from Akron, Ohio, who was hired by some New Yorkers to run a public utility company that was having various difficulties. Second, it was phony to assume that voters will take the public utility question into account in a Presidential election next November in which the public utility issue will not figure in the faintest degree.

A dozen other phoninesses went down before the reality of the public demand for Mr. Willkie. Several party usages that stood in the way were mere archaic mummeries such as grow up about any old institution. The idea that the Republican Party is like a tight fraternity, with a birthright requirement for membership, the idea that only a lifelong Republican could be nominated—all that went down before the reality that a party organization is an implement of democracy, available for use by all the people. The opposition to Mr. Willkie by Southern delegations, such as Mississippi and Louisiana—that was wholly phony, because there is no real Republican Party in those States. All such artificial impediments went down before the reality of Mr. Willkie's personality, and the public support behind him.

THE NOMINATION was made by delegates who in the beginning were reluctant to do it—but afterward had the happiness of men who do the right thing. Fully 400 of the delegates who nominated Mr. Willkie had intended to take some different course.

Hardly ever was the anticipation of experts so reversed. As late as the end of the second ballot, the common judgment of delegates and minor leaders—the only kind of leaders there were—was that Mr. Willkie would never get more than 250 votes at the extreme outside. At that stage, the expectation was that Senator Taft would be the nominee. But after Mr. Willkie went above 300, it was realized that to deny him the nomination would be, under the circumstances, a wrong which the country would resent. To have done that would have robbed this convention of its most precious asset—the fact that it was, in Mr. Hoover's phrase, "the free convention of a free people."

Then, when the thing was actually done, the advantages of it were realized. Every Taft vote in the country, every Republican vote, will be behind Mr. Willkie—and he will get an immense number of votes which an orthodox Republican nominee might not.

BY YIELDING to the public demand, the convention saved the Republican Party. More than that, it saved the two-party system. And that is important in a time when the forms and institutions of democratic government are everywhere tumbling or threatened.

That America's two-party system is saved is an invaluable thing. Quite probably the two parties are changed in nature. The Democratic Party, taken over by the New Dealers as respects leadership, has gone far in the direction of collectivism, it has become cousin to socialism. At the same time the Republican Party now moves in the direction of what was traditional Jeffersonian democracy. There is in Mr. Willkie much of the Jeffersonian Democrat, including especially his emphasis on individualism. In Mr. Willkie's past political associations and activities, in his writings and speeches and in the big robustness of his personality—in all that lies one conspicuous creed. The individual citizen must not be oppressed or frustrated by big business—but also: neither must the individual be oppressed or limited by big government.

T. W. A. Orders 15 New Airplanes at Cost of $1,500,000

New York, June 28 (AP).—Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc., has ordered 15 modernized DC-3 airplanes from the Douglas Aircraft Co., Inc., Santa Monica, Calif., it was announced today.

The order involves upward of $1,500,000.

The new craft will carry 24 passengers as against 21 for the present model. Nine of the new transports will be delivered by December 31 and the other six by next spring.

Jack Frye, president of the airline, said T. W. A.'s rapid expansion and plans for the extension of routes were the reasons for the order. The airline's business has been more than 60 per cent better in 1940 than in the previous year's corresponding period. The new planes will give T. W. A. a fleet of 55 transports.

Tour Tomorrow of City's Civil War Defenses

A tour of Washington's Civil War defenses will be made tomorrow under the auspices of the naturalist division of the park service, fourth of a series of summer outings offered by the department. Persons with cars desiring to attend should be at Conduit road and Nebraska avenue northwest at 8:30 a. m. A special bus will leave 1416 F street northwest at 9 a. m.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Willkie Tidal Wave

WENDELL WILLKIE was nominated because enough people realized that the Republican Party could not afford to approach the world of 1940 as if this were 1920 and 1932 and 1936. Yet that was precisely what the professional politicians and the old leaders were about to do until they arrived in Philadelphia and were overwhelmed by a great tide of popular opinion.

On foreign policy they could think of nothing better than a rather less intelligible and decidedly more illiterate version of the Harding platform of 1920. On domestic questions they got no further than an evasive and equivocal restatement of the campaign slogans of 1932 and 1936. Had these defeated leaders and highly unsuccessful politicians retained their control of the Republican Party, one of two things would have been the inevitable result. Either they would have gone down to a defeat more overwhelming than that of 1936, or they would have conducted a successful campaign to demoralize public opinion by appealing to complacency, self-indulgence and fear. It was an exceedingly bad dilemma for the party and for the nation. For even if the Old Guard had been defeated in November, they would, nevertheless, have disunited the nation and paralyzed the government and destroyed American prestige as a great power in the extremely critical months which are now beginning. And had they won in November, after making the kind of campaign which their platform and their preferred candidates foreshadowed, they would have devitalized the nation to a point where effective armament and a lucid and resolute defense of American interests would have been almost impossible.

There was no way out of this dangerous dilemma except to ignore the old leaders and the old manipulators and to choose a new leader. Fortunately a gifted leader was available, and fortunately the people knew it.

MR. WILLKIE is under no political obligation whatsoever to the Old Guard. Mr. Willkie's title comes directly from the people who, despite the stratagems and tricks of politicians, in the end were truly represented by the delegates. Mr. Willkie was not nominated in order to be another Old Guard Republican candidate but because the people believe he will not be an Old Guard Republican. Since his mandate comes from the people and not from the professionals, his mission is not to reflect the views of the party bureaucracy but to shape the policies of the party by going before the people as a national leader.

It would be nonsensical, almost hypocritical, to pretend to believe that the Republican Party deliberated at Philadelphia and agreed upon a set of principles and a national program.

The Old Guard drafted the platform and, with the exception of a few passages in Gov. Stassen's speech, did practically all the talking. That mess of verbiage is, if anyone cares to examine it seriously, irrelevant or self-contradictory when it is not intentionally meaningless. It was the outgiving of men who, having lost sight of the world they live in, being about to lose control of their party, were too rattled and frightened to think clearly about anything. They had no national policy, much less a set of principles, and, therefore, the immediate task of the new leadership of the Republican Party is to clear away the debris and shape the policies of the party to the principles of its candidate.

IF THIS SHOULD seem to some unduly severe criticism of men who have generally meant well and often have done well in matters where the highest interests of the nation are not involved, let them consider the position taken by the Old Guard while they were still in control of the convention. This was their platform when it is stripped of the rhetoric in which it was swaddled:

"The Republican Party promises to end unemployment, to make the farmers prosperous, and to increase the productivity of the nation by not doing many of the undesirable things that the New Deal has done. It will also arm the country in a world where so far as the party is concerned, the total victory of the totalitarian states is to be accepted as an accomplished fact.

"An unplanned and undirected competitive management of industry is to produce armaments sufficient to withstand the power of the totalitarian states completely organized for war, and at the same time, along with the great and necessary armaments it is also to produce an agreeable prosperity like that of the Coolidge era. By refraining from making the mistakes of the New Deal the party will enable the nation to have its cake and eat it, too. The party will provide both guns and butter, a great fleet and a great air force and a big Army along with high wages, high prices, good profits and no such nonsense as universal service."

CONTINUING OUR paraphrase of the Old Guard's position:

"The nation is to be protected by the Atlantic Ocean, by these armaments which are to be built according to the principles of the Coolidge era, and by not saying too many unpleasant things about Hitler (except when Mr. Hoover called him despotic, brutal, lawless and aggressive). Behind this protecting shield, the American economic system is to continue intact, untroubled and securely isolated in a world where almost everywhere else the system of private property and free labor and free enterprise has given way to military socialism based on enslaved labor. To be sure the depression of 1932 was due to the financial crisis in Europe, especially to the effect of Britain's going off the gold standard. Mr. Hoover has always insisted upon this. But in 1940 the Republican Party can assure the nation that even if Britain, not merely the British gold standard but British sea power and the British commercial system, is overthrown, America can still go on doing business as business was done in 1928-1929.

"It may be necessary, to be sure, to raise the tariff so as to exclude the imports produced by the regimented serfs of Europe. But we shall, nevertheless, do business with totalitarian Europe: we shall be glad to sell them our crops and our raw materials, but we shall refuse to be paid in goods, and we do not wish to be paid in gold because there is already too much gold buried in Kentucky. We are practical men and we shall sell the American surpluses even though we do not get paid for them.

"Finally, we are idealists, not starry-eyed idealists, but nevertheless idealists. Therefore, though we regard ourselves as too weak to help the Allies, and are even afraid to mention them by name, when they are safely defeated we shall, as Mr. Hoover pointed out, invite ourselves to Hitler's peace conference and there we shall persuade him to be kind, there we shall use our enormous and uncontaminated moral influence to save free men from destruction.

"These, ladies and gentlemen, are the things we promise to do for you, and since no one else has ever promised you so many things, we feel we are entitled to govern this country in the greatest crisis in the history of the modern world."

THIS CONCLUDES the paraphrased summary of the positions which the Old Guard had taken when the Willkie tidal wave washed them overboard. It may be admitted that judged by the standards of normal times their performance was practically routine politics. But though it may seem to some rather "unrealistic" to insist that these are not normal times, the fact is that the times are not normal. And, therefore, what could formerly be tolerated in a mood of cynical disillusionment with politicians is not now tolerable.

Muddle-headness in statesmen has become fully as dangerous to the lives and fortunes of the people as muddle-headedness in a general or in an admiral. Sleep-walking in politicians is as dangerous as sleep-walking on the bridge of a ship at sea. If the officers and men who are our first line of defense were as undisciplined and as demoralized, as unaware and as irresponsible as the politicians who control them still think it quite all right to be, they would not be excused with an indulgent cynicism. The politicians have abused their privileges long enough and now they need to be reminded sternly that their old slovenly ways are no longer good enough. It is now time to have done with the kind of political behavior which has ruined every other democracy on earth, and there is no time left for the old monkeyshines.

And that, I believe, is the belief of the men and women who rose up this week and nominated Wendell Willkie.

IN THE CLOSING MINUTES OF THE G. O. P. CONVENTION WENDELL WILLKIE (ON ROSTRUM) PLEDGED HIMSELF TO "FURTHER THE PRESERVATION OF AMERICAN DEMOCRACY."

D. C. Moves to Eliminate Its Worst Traffic Bottleneck

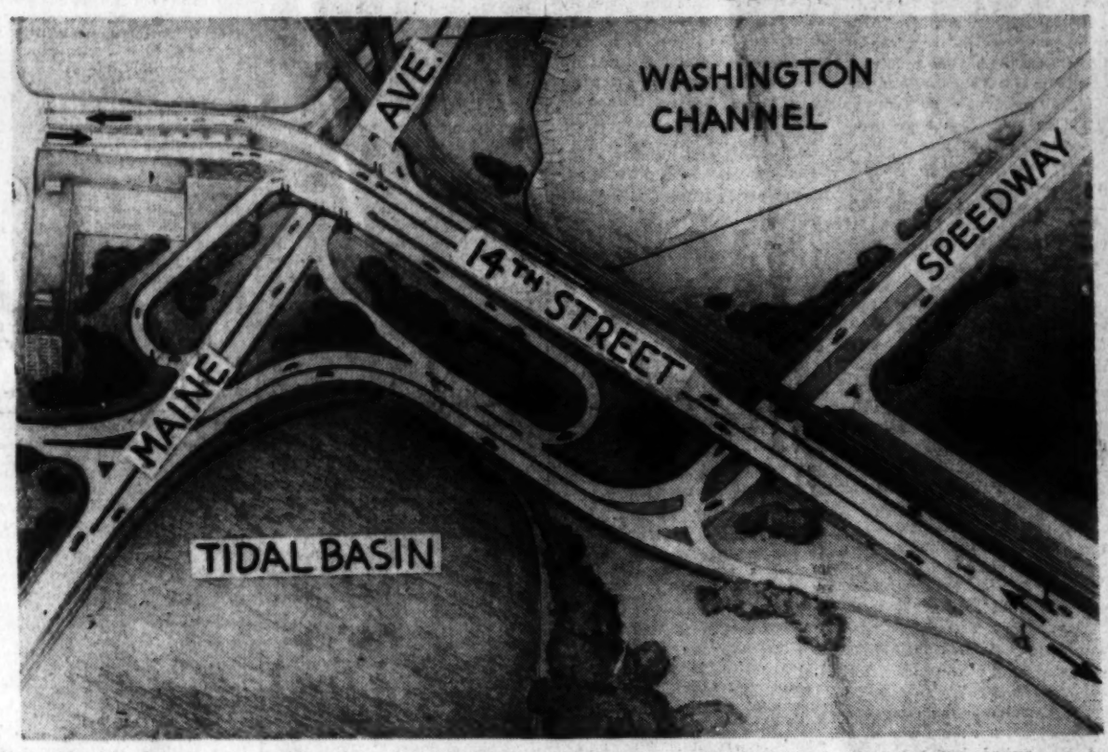
A request for funds to begin work on the proposed grade separation project at Fourteenth street and Maine avenue southwest will be included in the 1942 budget estimates next year, Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, announced yesterday.

He told a luncheon meeting of the American Automobile Association advisory board at the Willard Hotel that intricate plans for streamlining the congested intersection would cost "in excess of $1,000,000."

All agencies involved in the job are not fully in accord with tentative schemes to overpass Maine avenue, said Whitehurst, and considerable work is yet necessary before final plans can be adopted.

At present, he said, provisions have been made to make the hazardous corner—described as one of Washington's worst traffic jam centers—as accident proof as possible. Ramps leading from the Fourteenth street overpass will permit turns of every necessary type, Whitehurst declared, and the traffic flow on both thoroughfares will be greatly facilitated..

He told the meeting that traffic volume at Fourteenth street and Maine avenue has increased 150 per cent in the last three years. A recent count showed a normal daily flow of 50,000 cars at the intersection, Whitehurst reported.



A week-end count on both Highway and Memorial bridges showed 118,000 autos crossing from Saturday morning until Sunday night—13,500 of which bore tags other than the District, Maryland and Virginia.

Guests of honor at yesterday's luncheon were motorists who have been a member of the local AAA Club for 25 or more years. They were Henry Schaffert, 7300 Alaska avenue northwest, 30 years; William M. Hannay, 207 I street northwest, 27 years; Christian Heurich, sr., 1307 New Hampshire avenue northwest, 25 years; James A. Messer, 1206 K street northwest, 25 years; Irving O. Ball, Wyming Apartments, 25 years; William W. Everett, 2010 Woodland drive northwest, 25 years; George E. Martin, 1661 Crescent place northwest, 25 years, and Edward B. Martin, 1401 Girard street northwest, 25 years.

Rights Plank 'Amazing' To A.A.U.W.

Measure Adopted In G. O. P. Platform Has the Opposition Of Association

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post's Club Editor.

Action of the Republican National Convention indorsing the proposed equal rights amendment to the Constitution, focuses the spotlight on the opposition of the American Association of University Women to this measure which is sponsored by the National Woman's Party.

Dr. Susan Kingsbury, of Bryn Mawr, chairman of the association's committee on the economic and legal status of women, who was here yesterday for the meeting of the committee on international relations, expressed "amazement" that the Republicans had adopted the equal rights plank.

The A. A. U. W. has a legislative item which "supports the principle of equality for women, but opposes the proposed equal rights amendment to the Constitution as a method of obtaining equality." It also has a legislative item on its program calling for "opposition to discrimination in Government employment on the basis of sex or marital status."

Dr. Kingsbury, committee, at its May meeting, recommended "that A. A. U. W. members and branches throughout the country immediately, by personal interviews, urge the delegates to all party conventions to include in their party platforms a statement opposing discriminations in Government employment on the basis of sex or marital status."

The National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, although it is among the organizations that have indorsed the equal rights amendment, did not request that it be included in the plank of either major party. The plank requested by the B. & P. W. federation was: "The right to work for compensation shall not be abridged or denied by reason of race, religion, sex or martial status."

Refugee Problems Being Worked Out

The meeting of the committee on international relations, which Dr. Kingsbury came to the Capital to attend, was devoted to a discussion of the problem of aiding European university women and their children. Miss Shirley Farr, of Chicago and Vermont, past president of the Women's Overseas Service League, was here to preside as chairman of the committee.

The American university women are not only aiding in every way possible, those who have come here as refugees, but are preparing to open their homes to the children of members of the British Federation of University Women, which has made an appeal for such aid. Details of this plan will be worked out in cooperation with the United States committee to care for European children.

Bryn Mawr College already has announced the opening of one of its halls to care for the children as they come over and wait to be assigned to homes. Quick response has come from branches of the association throughout the country, with announcement of the plan, more than 200 members already having signified their willingness to take one or more children into their care for the duration of the war.

The refugee problem is threefold as it affects the A. A. U. W., Dr. Esther Brunauer, associate in international education, who functions as secretary of the committee, explained following yesterday's meeting.

Since 1933 the association has been aiding the women scholars who have come to this country from central Europe, as they have lost their positions or been obliged to flee the totalitarian regimes. In this it has cooperated with the Friends Service Committee and the National Refugee Service Inc., in New York.

Most of the aid has been that of providing information as to fields in which jobs were available and as to where to apply for them. In some cases letters of introduction have been supplied which have led to positions.

The second phase of the problem is that of education of the public to accept the refugee workers without antagonism. Some, who do not know the facts, think that millions have come into the country, when actually, since 1933, less than 100,000 have come, Dr. Brunauer pointed out. In these years this number is probably balanced by the emigration from the United States she said.

The association, in dealing with the refugee university women, tries to decentralize them and direct them out into various parts of the country as fast as possible, where they can compete on an equal basis according to their ability in the field in which they are equipped.

The association also offers to them "that intangible thing of friendship," said Dr. Brunauer, opening the clubrooms in New York and those of other branches to them, where they can gather and often meet American friends whom they have known abroad.

The third phase of the work has been sending direct financial help, through contributions from the branches, to university women of the different countries, who have been deprived of their livelihood as a result of the war but who will not leave their homes. Different branches have pledged the $12 or $15 a month needed to care for these women during their present need.

Members of the committee here for yesterday's conference were, in addition to Dr. Kingsbury and Miss Farr, Mrs. Harry Crum, chairman of the hospitality committee of the New York City branch; Dean Margaret Corwin, chairman of the International Federation of University Women Interchange Committee, and Mrs. Carl Seasword, international relations chairman of the Detroit branch.

Rep. Bolton Sued for $150,000

Mrs. Frances P. Bolton, Ohio Republican Congresswoman, was sued for $150,000 in the District Court yesterday by Edward S. Smith, 3215 Cathedral avenue northwest, who claimed she broke a contract to pay him $2,500 a month to work for world peace.

Smith's complaint was filed by Attorney Raymond S. Norris. It charges that in July, 1934, Mrs. Bolton induced him to resign as publicity director of the National Republican Congressional Campaign Committee and devote all his time to "study, research work, advancement and promulgation of a plan to foster and insure ultimate world peace."

Was to Get $2,500 A Month

Smith's complaint said Mrs. Bolton agreed to pay him $2,500 a month for five years and to renew the agreement for five years more if Smith thought the work ought to be continued. The complaint said Mrs. Bolton also agreed to repay Smith for getting a building in Washington to house his peace library and for establishing a home and study in New Hampshire.

The complaint says the New Hampshire place was to enable Smith "better to pursue uninterruptedly the completion and perfection of said world peace plan during the summer months, when the climate in Washington might otherwise impede and disturb the continuity of such work." The place also was to be used as a rendezvous by persons in sympathy with the project.

Smith's complaint says Mrs. Bolton paid him until the latter part of 1936 and then stopped. He asserts that she refused to reimburse him for the library or the summer place. Attorney Norris asked for a jury trial.

Mrs. Bolton was elected in February to complete the term of her late husband, Chester C. Bolton, Representative of the Twenty-second Ohio Congressional District. The Bolton home is at Lyndhurst, Ohio, and their home in Washington is at 2301 Wyoming avenue northwest.

Smith and Mrs. Bolton both were in Philadelphia yesterday.

Navy Orders 19 Ships Begun

liaison agent in the new plan for an economic bloc of the American nations, bound together by a cartel to block totalitarian trade penetration of the hemisphere.

Estimates of the amount of new appropriations the President may ask to equip the Army ranged to as high as $5,000,000,000.

Roosevelt Expounds iVews

At his press conference Mr. Roosevelt said the situation might best be described as follows:

When new facilities are created for emergency production of armaments, it is cheaper in the long run to give sufficiently large orders in order to keep factories going—at least for a while—and that is being done at the present time. The idea is that considerable money would be saved by giving industry sufficiently large orders to lessen risks on the planning end of production and assure against large losses in experimentation.

In the case of airplanes, application of the idea would mean placing orders for considerably more than there were appropriations at the present time. The Administration's present objective, in the case of airplanes, is an output of about 50,000 a year, and even if the goal is not realized immediately, there is no reason why it should not be sought by placing orders for more than there is money to pay for at this time.

Secretary Morgenthau, acting under the Presidential proclamation of Thursday established an office of Merchant Ship Movements under supervision of Assistant Secretary Herbert E. Gaston.

The new regulations in addition to forbidding unauthorized departures provide that the captain of a port or any other officer designated by the Secretary of the Treasury may order the search "at any time of any vessel, foreign or domestic, or any person or package thereon, within the territorial waters of the United States, to place guards upon such vessels, and remove therefrom any or all persons not specially authorized by him to go or to remain on board thereof."

Treasury officials said the new regulations could be invoked to keep the French luxury liner Normandie and the British Queen Elizabeth, as well as many other foreign ships, in American waters indefinitely, although they denied that any such specific action was yet contemplated.

The new duties of Nelson, at present director of the Treasury Procurement Division, were outlined by the White House as follows:

Determination of the most economical methods of purchase of representative items common to several agencies and the assignment of purchasing functions to best qualified agencies.

Collection, compilation and keeping current statistics on all Federal purchases.

Coordination of research in procurement standardization.

Determination of the combined immediate and future material requirements of all Federal agencies.

Recommending new legislation to simplify procurement.

Investigating the necessity for recommending priority of orders for material essential to national defense over deliveries for private account or for export.

Commanders Named

The War Department announced commanders today for two new "streamlined" divisions recently ordered created for the expanding Army.

Brig. Gen. Joseph W. Stillwell, now on duty with the Second Division at Fort Sam Houston, Tex., was made commander of the new Seventh Division, whose headquarters are at Camp Ord, Calif.

Brig. Gen. Philip Peyton, commandant of the Army War College, was named commander of the 8th Division, at Camp Jackson, S. C.

The President signed yesterday the $85,891,777 second deficiency appropriations bill containing funds for new defenses against fifth column and subversive activities.

The bill provides $2,200,000 for an additional 769 men for the border patrol of the Immigration Service and $259,360 to enable the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation to keep closer watch on alien seamen employed on American vessels.

Rixey Smiths Entertain For Red Cross Today

Flower Show and Supper at Gracelands; Amusing Maps Sent With Invitations To Show Guests How to Get There

DEBUTS AND BIG RECEPTIONS may have ceased for the summer slump, but benefits in war-conscious Washington keep right on going. One of the largest and most unusual is scheduled for this afternoon and evening—a flower show and supper at Gracelands, the Virginia home of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Rixey Smith.

Every penny will go to the American Red Cross. The show is sponsored by the Garden Club of Fairfax and the Difficult Run Garden Club, and people from Washington and Maryland as well as Virginia are expected to attend.

The owners of Gracelands have sent out amusing little maps with the invitations, to show motorists how to get there. At one corner is a little notice reading "Not responsible for lost or misplaced landmarks." The map is illustrated, among the pictures being one of Gracelands, which is just beyond the Madeira School and the Robert Fell place, Cornwall.

Besides flowers as an attraction, there will be dancing to a hillbilly orchestra after supper. The Smiths have turned their lovely old home entirely over for the cause, and guests will have a chance to admire their many fine antiques.

Among the 15 interesting classes will be arrangements of roses and other flowers in silver bowls, field flowers in wooden containers, bouquets for a country bride, and arrangements in antique containers.

Then, there's to be a miniature class, which include fresh vegetables in a basket, a summer salad bowl, a cup arrangement with a saucer as background, and, most unusual of all, hats trimmed with fresh flowers. The latter will be placed on a milk bottle as a rack, allowing the stems of the flowers to remain in water in the bottle.

Several Luncheons Are Scheduled

Luncheon will be served at Gracelands, but there also will be several large private luncheon parties beforehand. At one of these Mrs. Frederick D. Richardson and Mrs. Robert Graham will be hostesses at White House, the Richardson home in Fairfax.

Among their guests will be the flower show judges, including Mrs. Malcolm Matheson and Mrs. Louis Scott, of Alexandria; Mrs. Joseph Walker, of Woodberry Forest, and Miss Mary Metzger, of Leesburg.

Others at the lucheon will be Mrs. John McMullen, Mrs. Charles Council, Mrs. Baltimore Calvert, Mrs. George Macatee, Mr. and Mrs. Rixey-Smith, Col. and Mrs. H. W. T. Eglin, Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Collins, Mrs. William Wimsatt, Mrs. Joseph Crockett, Mrs. Frederick Van Nuys, Mrs. Baldwin Day Spilman, Mrs. Richard Barrett, Mrs. Charles Cushman, Mrs. Robert Fletcher, Mrs. Adeline Serre, Carroll Hunter, and Lyle Smith.

Many Notables Among Patrons

Among the many prominent patrons of the flower show and supper will be Counselor of the State Department R. Walton Moore, the Misses Moore, the Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Price, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Downs, Mr. and Mrs. Jodett Shouse, Mrs. George Rothwell Brown and Mrs. Thomas Randolph Keith. Prizes will be presented at 5 o'clock by Col. Henry W. T. Eglin.

Mrs. Robert Graham, chairman of the affair, Mrs. Edward Howrey, president of the Fairfax Garden Club, and Mrs. David L. Wing, president of the Difficult Run Club, are being assisted by a large committee.

Among the busy workers are Mrs. Charles Poser, Mrs. Douglas Murray, Mrs. John Hauber, Mrs. Smith Bowman, Mrs. Lomax Taylor, Mrs. Willard Herring, Mrs. Edward Offley, Mrs. Duncan Hannegan, Miss Margaret Moore, Mrs. Lennig Sweet, Mrs. William Earle, Mrs. James Nickell, Mrs. Craig Hunter, Mrs. Ray Middleton, Mrs. Russell Maxwell, Mrs. Arthur William Radford, Mrs. Charles Parker, Mrs. W. LIEUT. AND MRS. JOHN GORDON JOHNSON, whose wedding took place here on Monday at the Sixth Presbyterian Church

About the Town with DUDLEY HARMON

ADRIEN GONVERS, a French professor in Washington, recently received a letter from a friend in England. It gives an interesting picture of what life in London is like these days, and wasn't even opened by the censor. Parts of the letter follow:

"If anyone could have told me a year ago that I would be reading today of all my beloved friends going through this hell, and that I would be seeing their names in the daily casualty lists and hearing on all sides tales of unimaginable horror, without completely breaking down, I would not have believed it. But that is what is happening now every day and has been happening since the war began in earnest when Holland and Belgium were invaded.

"AS YOU probably know, we were beginning to believe, here in London, that the war was just going to be a nice, quiet, sit-down sort of entertainment. London had reacted sharply after the first shock of September and once we had realized that those early air raid warnings were mostly caused by silly lone German reconnaissance planes.

The town became gayer than ever; an added spice was given to the West End by the presence of all those very glamorous uniforms belonging to boys on week-end leave with plenty of money in their pockets and eager for one last fling before things started going. Theaters reopened and were crammed, so were night clubs and hotels. Life all through the winter was pleasant.

"EVEN WHEN THE Low Countries were invaded, we were confident in the strength of our armies being rushed to their aid. Even when Holland capitulated, the shock was not extreme, except that the very efficient fifth column activities made us sit up and take notice. No, the real blow came when Reynaud made his first broadcast statement, just after the Germans had succeeded in crossing the Meuse. I was sitting in my very cozy flat that evening listening to the 6 o'clock news (you can imagine how we live stuck to the radio) and we heard the French Prime Minister announce the shattering news that, owing to grave mistakes, which would be punished, the Germans had crossed the Meuse and reached Arras and Amiens, which were already in the enemy's hands. This was the first time we realized the overwhelming power of the German attack, and the shock of that news on London can be imagined.

The depression here was terrific. Everyone started to wonder whether the French army was as great as had been supposed and we all woke up to the ghastly possibility of defeat.

"THIS DEPRESSION, however, was short lived. The reaction came soon, helped on by the magnificent reports from our air force, which was performing miraculous feats against overwhelming odds. A new feeling of grim determination came over us and everyone set to work as never before. Holidays were canceled (unheard of move in dear, slow England), and soon we were all feeling better in spite of the continued bad news pouring in. Then came the bitterest blow of all—the unexplained surrender and apparent treachery of that charming young man, the King of the Belgian. But by this time we were inured to shocks. We were determined to fight on.

"That is the situation to date and we hope and pray that the subsequent engagements may end in a speedy victory for us."

Johnsons Take Wedding Trip

After a honeymoon, Lieut. John Gordon Johnson, U. S. A., and Mrs. Johnson, will go to San Juan, Puerto Rico, to live. Mrs. Johnson is the former Miss Rachel Isabel Merritt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Merritt, of Washington, and Lieut. Johnson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Johnson, of Carrizo Springs, Tex.

The couple were married on Monday in the Sixth Presbyterian Church, the Rev. Orris G. Robinson and J. Herbert Garner officiating. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white lace, with graduated ruffles, a sweetheart neck trimmed with pearl clips, and a floor length tulle veil. She carried an arm bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Miss Riley Colette Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Moore, was maid of honor, wearing pink net with a full gathered skirt and pleated bodice. A hat to match completed her ensemble and she carried pink roses and blue delphiniums.

Andrew P. Johnson, jr., was best man, and the ushers were Theodore Reinoehl, Lieut. C. W. Duke and Lieut. D. M. Matheson.

A reception for the wedding party and out-of-town guests followed. As her going away costume the bride chose Navy blue and white checked English voile with lace collar and cuffs and white accessories.

The Rev. Louis Bour officiated at the wedding, which was followed by a reception at the Asheville Woman's Club. The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Robert Hare, wore white lace over ivory satin and carried lillies of the valley and white orchids. Mrs. James Lyle, her sister, was matron of honor, and the bridesmaids were the Misses Margaret Clasty, Mary McCandless and Hazel Broxton. Orville Loeffler was best man.

The bride attended Maryville College in Tennessee and her husband is a graduate of Illinois State College and the Washington College of Law.

Miss Eustis, Fiance Feted At Dinner

Mrs. Carlos del Mar Gives Party for Engaged Couple

As a climax to the many parties held in their honor, Miss Jane Eustis and George Wheeler were entertained last night at a large dinner given by Mr. Wheeler's mother, Mrs. Carlos del Mar. The young couple will be married this afternoon, with a reception following at the F Street Club.

Including the wedding party and the numerous out-of-town guests, there were 50 present last night. The dinner was held at the Sulgrave Club, where Mrs. del Mar received the company. She wore a white crepe gown, simply made, with a diamond necklace. Mr. and Mrs. H. Chotard Eustis, parents of the bride, and Mrs. William North Sturtevant, Mr. Wheeler's sister, were among members of the two families present.

The guests were seated at one big table, shaped in the form of a wedding bell. On a platform behind the head of the table, where Miss Eustis and Mr. Wheeler sat, was an enormous bell made of white roses and lillies of the valley. The white motif was further carried out in the big bowls of flowers flanked by tapers set at intervals down the table.

After seeing her son married off, Mrs. del Mar and her husband hope to go on a motor jaunt for several weeks. They will drive to Canada, and return by way of Maine, where they have a house, and Cape Cod. Labor Day will see them back in their farm near Frederick, Md., where they always give a large house party over this holiday.

Mr. del Mar has just returned —"with an aching back"—from five strenuous days at the Republican National Convention.

The Rev. J. A. White officiated in the presence of the two families and close friends.

The bride wore a white bouffant frock of mousseline de soie and lace, with a halo of orange blossoms and carried Madonna lilies and lillies of the valley. She was given in marriage by her father.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Five Years' Wed, Woman Goes Visiting and Meets 'Only Man in the World' for Her; He Feels As She Does and Proposes; What of Her Husband?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Six months ago, while visiting, I met and fell deeply in love with a man who was equally attracted to me. At our first meeting, I knew that he was the only man in the world for me. He soon told me that he loved me and asked if there were any hope of our being married.

It sounds very simple, doesn't it? And it would be, but for the fact that I already have one perfectly good husband, who is attractive, holds as splendid position and has always been very good to me. I always thought that I loved him—and I do, in that I respect and like him and wish for his success and happiness. But the love that I have for the other man is entirely different. I had read about it, but never experienced it before.

I have not seen him for four months, although we correspond. I have not seen him because I have been trying to decide the best course to follow. It is extremely distasteful to me to hurt my husband, but I do not think I am being fair to any of us in continuing this way. I am 27 years old, my husband is 30 and we have been married five years. The other man is 35. He has been married but is divorced. His wife remarried the day after their divorce became final, which was three years ago.

I am writing to you because I need advice. I have told no other person, because whatever course I decide to follow, I wish to carry through with the least possible gossip and comment. I am not saying that I will do what you advocate, but it will help me to make up my mind. Sincerely yours, JANE.

Don't Confuse Love With Sensual Counterfeit

DEAR JANE: Someone has defined love as "the desire to GIVE fullness of life"—which, if true, lifts love above personal seeking for emotional gratification. And this definition causes one to wonder whether your feeling for your husband is not, perhaps, love in the best and most lasting sense; and whether your heady attraction to and for the other man isn't a gaudy sensual counterfeit of love. This is a possibility you should ponder well in deciding what course to follow.

In my opinion, such confusion of emotion and purpose as now besets you should be clarified and resolved step by step. And the first step consists, I should think, in discussing with your husband this lightning-inflicted rift within the lute of conjugal fidelity which threatens to wreck relationship.

Remember that it is his marriage as much as yours; that you are as yet bound by pledge and circumstance and appreciation-of-his-decency to a technical and spiritual first loyalty to him, regardless of your sudden obsession with the other men; that he (your husband) trusts you absolutely, and that it would be, therefore, damnably treacherous of you to decide, by and for yourself, that the interloper is your one true love—without giving your husband ample opportunity to disprove, if possible and if he so desires, that conclusion.

As I once heard an urbane, philosophical and most monogamously married man say, "After five years, marriage inevitably cools to monotony, and that is no cynical indictment of either marriage or married love. But it certainly is an argument against discarding one marriage in favor of another, just because the temperature of the relationship-in-hand has subsided from the feverish to the normal." He remarked the futility of rethreading the loom of one's life every five years, for no other or better purpose than to recapture that vibrant romantic tension which is more Nature's spur to reproduction of species than a spiritual or physical necessity of man—as a mature and rational social being.

Another man, writing in Readers' Digest a few years ago, told how he was beset by temptation to divorce, comparable to yours, and how he ran away with his own wife, instead. By lavishing upon his wife, in their legitimate elopement, the (shall we say?) second-installment ardor which the "other woman" aroused in his breast, he evoked a brilliantly provocative reaction in kind which caused them to fall head over heels in love again. And he learned what is given to some few truly enlightened married lovers to know, namely: that any one woman can be all women to one man (and vice versa), if such is the complementary relationship they mutually aspire to develop.

I suggest the possibility that, bored by the monotony of five years' peaceful, unimaginative marriage, you went visiting in search of adventure, and attracted to yourself an experience for which you were unconsciously hungering: To-wit, renascence of romantic excitement. (Fourth-dimensional thinkers tell us, you know, that all experiences which come to us are sought by us; never fortuitously or fatefully visited upon us). I suggest that you might, if you tried, find as much richness of love with your husband (and perhaps far more) as ever you could with his current rival.

And I advise you, therefore, to bring this attraction out of the secret atmosphere of poetic intrigue in which it is now flourishing, mushroom-like, and discuss it sensibly with your "perfectly good" and invariably kind husband. By examining it significance openly, in the prosaic light of common sense conversational analysis with one as immediately concerned as yourself, you should be able to see it for what it is; and you may discover that it is but a tinsel trinket, compared to what you have—or to what you might develop, through intelligent management of your present investment. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Smart Jackets for Cool Days to Come

Here is the jacket story told in short. At left is the popular poker chip red box jacket. It is of lightweight wool yet is warm enough for the chilliest evening during this unpredictable summer. The collarless neckline and roomy stitched pockets are points in its favor. At right—The same girl, Helen Green Peters, wears another versatile jacket, cool navy sharkskin cut like a bush jacket. In the oval, a brief rayon and silk jacket, rich with embroidery, is worn against a very plain dinner gown

All-Around Jacket Is Needed In Every Summer Wardrobe

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor

THERE has been some justified grumbling in town this summer by those not prepared for unseasonable weather. Washington women while well stocked with cool sheers and cotton washables, never quite got around to buying the light jackets they needed for unexpected cool days. This situation was emphasized recently at an informal "hen" party when the one woman present who was noticeable for perfectly appointed costume was warmly clad in a neat white tailored Norfolk over a cool looking cotton.

MARSHALL ADAMS

Like this Norfolk, most of the season's jackets have a nice way with them. They are "ambidextrous"—go well with either daytime or evening things and are casual yet pretty enough to be thrown over dinner clothes when there is a chill around the moon.

Box Wool Jacket Tops in Popularity

The most popular jacket in town and the one being bought by everyone with vacation wanderlust is the boxy wool jacket in poker-chip red or billiard green. This jacket is three-quarter length and double breasted or buttoned with one great pearl button. It can be tossed over everything from tennis shorts to a slick white jersey dinner gown. In navy flannel, it looks well even on the large woman; in lighter pastels, it's smart on the junior miss.

For sports-minded women, there is the bush jacket, named after the African bush hunter's shirt-like coats and adapted a decade ago by men only. This bush jacket is good in navy or tomato colored sharkskin and is uncommonly chic in white when worn over brown or summer green. It is lightweight and cool, too, and with it's long sleeves and adjustable neckline is a good stand-by when rain clouds gather or when the cotton frock under it looks wilted.

Jackets to Suit Every Personality

In the long jacketed family there are smart torso silk and rayons or sharkskins with deep patch pockets and set-on waistbands which loop into front bows. These are smartest worn with slacks or contrasting skirts. The jersey cardigan, short sleeved hand knit sweater, and pastel angora (college men say they like angoras even if they do shed) are youthful jackets for young wardrobes. And, the classic short white linen jacket, to be worn with anything from gingham checks to fine white spectator dresses, continues as popular this summer as the English Norfolk coat it was borrowed from a half century ago.

New Type Sheets Make Home News

Bed sheets make news after years of humdrum existence. That's because of two recent changes in their design. There's a no-tuck sheet with pockets at the top and bottom to make it fit the mattress. The idea behind that is to avoid wrinkling of the lower bedsheet. And there's another sheet with hems woven into the fabric as a decorative finish. This was done to save loss of length in making hems after sheets are bought. Both of these newest styles are made of preshrunk muslins.

Especially helpful to the person furnishing a house or apartment for the first time is the method used of marking the newer hemmed sheets. They are designated on labels as single bed, full-length, twin bed, full-length, or double bed, full-length.

Goober Oil for Cuticles

Hollywood, Calif.—Gale Page, starring in "The Life of Knute Rockne," is chalking up another use for peanut oil, which she likes for her complexion care. Gale has discovered that the warmed goober oil is wonderful for softening her finger-nail cuticle. She applies it nightly.

Match Parasols and Dress

The latest in fashion news is "match your parasol to your dress." Helen Gilbert takes the tip and dons a floor-length plaid cotton dinner gown. Shirt-maker style, the dress buttons from hem to neckline. The buttons are left open from the waist down, exposing a white pique underskirt. The pique is repeated on the collar and cuffs.

Exercise Loses Value If Made A Hard Job

Relaxing Necessary For Best Results To Be Obtained

By Ida Jean Kain

DON'T make such hard work of exercise! Take it easy. You know now that exercise isn't actually reducing . . . in fact, the fat it burns up isn't enough to notice. But you don't exercise for a thinner figure, you exercise for a trimmer one!

Start your calesthenics in a leisurely manner, lying on the floor. This position is efficient and relaxing, because no muscles have to be kept in tonic contraction to hold some segments stable, and the different parts can be free to move easily.

Test it yourself. Try bringing the knee up to the chest in the standing position. Now try it lying flat on your back. Taking this type of exercise from the lying down position not only cuts down the physiological cost of exercise, but is actually more effective. You can pull up and in with the lower abdominal muscles, pressing the small of the back to the floor, and thus exercise the important abdominal muscles while resting your back!

Various Leg Exercises

Make the same comparison of leg circling exercises while standing, then lying on the side of the floor, circling the leg from the hips. It is much easier to make wide circles from the prone position, and it's grand hip-slimming exercise.

All exercises taken in the lying down position eliminates strain from the legs and feet and that is quite important, if you are very heavy. Furthermore, it does away with the effort of holding yourself erect.

This lying down position is most effective for strengthening the abdominal muscles and flattening the midsection; for slimming the hips and firming the thighs. Good arm and shoulder and chest exercises can be taken by circling the arms overhead on the floor. Waistline exercises are the only ones which are more effective from the standing or kneeling position, for then you can bend, twist and turn more easily.

Avoid Strenuous Ones

The purpose of exercise is mainly to tone the muscles, increase one's feeling of fitness and to give one a supple, trimmer figure. Easy exercises in which each movement is exact, are infinitely more streamlining than a set in which you huff and puff and wind up exhausted.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Now that the wedding of Henry Ford 2d and Anne McDonnell is finally set for July 13, the town's interest in the love-match is hopped up. Young Henry doesn't look a bit like the older Ford men, for he's a chunky, round-faced lad, while his grandpa and papa are on the lean and somewhat hawkish order. He looks jolly, and so does the little Irish bride-to-be, whose family is enormous. It might well fill the whole church, if it is small, and two sisters and five cousins will be in the wedding party. Hank's brother Benson will "stand up for him," clutching the ring with both hands. Anne's family is well-heeled, though of course not in the Ford brackets, so the youngsters will start off with enough eating-money to see them through next winter. . . .

Carmen Miranda, that Brazilian bomber who started off all that "Souse American Way" stuff two years ago, sailed for her native Brazil today, no doubt to get a saucer of coffee and tell funny stories about those crazed gringos.

Reports from all over the country tell me that shooting galleries at fairs and parks are doing a boom business this summer. Well, it's good to keep the eye in trim and the trigger finger steady, but may the lads never have to use them on anything but clay pipes!

The humble umbrella, for the last two years a bit of a laughing stock because of the part it played in a certain tragedy at Munich, looms big in France, according to a letter from a girl friend of mine. Nearly every hapless refugee carries one. A psychologist would say it symbolizes protection, and that it is something on which a weary body can lean. But a bumbershoot has never been known to turn and baffle the screams of a dictator, or to turn an enemy shell.

Beauty Secrets

By CAROLYN ABBOTT

Reducing Bulges

FASHIONS in frocks change from season to season. But the ideal of a slim, well proportioned figure remains the same. At this time of year, bathing suits, evening gowns and play togs make bulges and excessive fat unflatteringly conspicuous.

Most women want a beautiful figure, but they don't want to bother about exercising and dieting. If their measurements are normal except for large hips, fat upper arms and back, they do not think that mere dieting will answer the purpose.

A new reducing treatment that has long been popular in Hollywood has just been introduced in Washington. This treatment is done with electric pads applied to the area to be reduced. It reduces fatty tissue through stimulation and exercising of the muscles. Inches disappear, but the weight remains unchanged.

The muscles rapidly contract and relax to such an extent that this treatment equals a 20-mile walk—all the time the woman is reclining on a soft couch. By this method, the anatomy is reduced only where necessary in order to achieve a more balanced figure.

Iced Coffee a Refreshing Hot-Weather Drink

IT SEEMS there is a "week" in the calendar for every kind of food. Iced Coffee Week is now being celebrated—June 23 to 29. Iced coffee makes a delicious and refreshing drink. Just as much care should be taken in making it as in making hot coffee.

There are two methods of preparing iced coffee. The coffee may be made twice as strong as usual and then poured while hot into glasses containing plenty of ice. This method retains more of the coffee flavor but requires double-strength brew to offset the melting of the ice. The second method is to make coffee as usual, chill it and pour it into glasses containing ice.

Coffee cubes insure real full strength, aroma, and taste. To make the cubes, use a heaping measuring tablespoon of coffee to each measuring cup of water. Fill the cube trays of refrigerator with the infusion while fresh and then freeze. To serve, place the cubes in tall glasses and fill with hot, freshly made coffee.

Iced coffee may also be served in the form of a Frozen Coffee Pudding. The following recipe makes about 1½ quarts of the pudding.

Frozen Coffee Pudding

Beat until light 3 egg yolks. Add gradually ¾ cup sugar, ½ cup hot milk, ½ cup strong coffee and ¾ cup cream. Cook these ingredients in a double boiler until they are thick. Soak 2 teaspoons gelatine in ½ cup cold milk. Dissolve this mixture in the hot pudding. Cool. Whip until stiff 3 egg whites to which has been added ½ teaspoon salt. Fold lightly into pudding mixture. Pack the pudding in a mold or into a refrigerator tray. Freeze until stiff. Serve with whipped cream.

Nominee Pledges Battle to Preserve American Democracy

By the Associated Press

Convention Hall, Philadelphia, June 28.—Wendell Willkie, made the following address today to the Republican National Convention:

I doubt if in all history of American political conventions any convention has ever been presided over with more impartiality, more fairness, and more ability than this one has been presided over by Joe Martin.

I want to say to the members of this convention that as your nominee I stand before you without a single pledge, promise, or understanding of any kind except for the advancement of your cause and the preservation of American democracy.

It is a moving and appealing and almost overwhelming thing to be the nominee of a great convention of this kind.

"Merely to Thank You"

I doubt if any man who has not experienced it could imagine and understand the full import of the emotion it brings to one when such obligations come to him.

I wanted to come here to you this afternoon, not to discuss policies or principles, but merely to thank you, to express my appreciation, and to tell you of the deep sense of dedication I feel to the cause that you have asked me to lead.

Democracy and our way of life is facing the most crucial test it has ever faced in all its long history; and we here are not Republicans, alone, but Americans, to dedicate ourselves to the democratic way of life in the United States because here stands the last firm untouched foothold of freedom in all the world.

And as your nominee I expect to conduct a crusading, aggressive, fighting campaign to bring unity to America, to bring the unity of labor and capital, agriculture and manufacture, farmer and worker, and all classes to this great cause of the preservation of freedom.

"We Have a Common Purpose"

I think as one who has been a member of each of those classes in the course of my brief life, I understand that in America we all have a common purpose at this time that this way of life shall not pass from this earth. For the rehabilitation of American economy, for the building of an adequate defense so that no dictator, however, strong, may seek to strike; for the unity of our people; for calling again America to its great tradition of progress, I pledge myself to you, and I ask each of you to join with me in this great crusade.

Forty-eight days ago, and only 48 days ago, I started out to preach to the American people the doctrine of unity, the doctrine of the destiny of America, and the fact that I am the nominee of this convention at this time proves conclusively how appealing is this simple doctrine to the American people.

So you Republicans I call upon you to join me, help me. The cause is great. We must win. We cannot fail if we stand together in one united fight. I thank you.

Now I am going to sleep for a week!

Day Camp Children Run 'Tiny Town' Community

A "Tiny Town" community in which children will play such adult roles as storekeeper, housewife and policeman will be a feature of the summer program at Southeast Washington's Friendship House, 619 D street southeast, Miss Lydia Burklin, executive of the agency, announced yesterday.

For 140 stay-at-home youngsters, the settlement is arranging a day-camp program, with day outings for children alternating between Fords Beach, on Chesapeake Bay, and the Leiter estate above Chain Bridge in Virginia.

Monday, July 8, is the opening date of the Chest-supported settlement's summer activities, which about 500 children and young people are expected to join. Registrations are now being accepted at the house.

Churches Observe Red Cross Sunday

Heeding the appeal of the Church Peace Union, in cooperation with leaders of the Catholic, Protestant and Jewish faiths, District churches tomorrow will join in a national observance of Red Cross Sunday.

Request for the observance came through the union's trustees and the World Alliance for International Friendship, both of which organizations were founded by Andrew Carnegie.

"As Americans recall with pride and thanksgiving their own heritage," said the union, in part, "may there come an awakening to the opportunity that is ours to bring help to tortured minds and bodies in a dozen lands."

Nine Indicted As Gypsum Price-Fixers

Five Corporations Named in Charge; Material Held A Defense Need

Five corporations and nine corporate officers yesterday were indicted here on charges of conspiring to maintain high prices of material which in "the existing national emergency" the Government may need for "military purposes."

Justice F. Dickinson Letts, of the District Court, received the indictments from a special grand jury which has been investigating the charges for nearly three months. The inquiry was directed by members of the antitrust division of the Department of Justice, as part of a nationwide crusade against monopolistic practices in the building industry.

Gypsum Is Basis

The indictment asserted that the defendants conspired to maintain "high, non-competitive prices" for gypsum wallboard, and said: "Gypsum wallboard became commercially important during the World War of 1914-1918, principally because of its extensive use by the Government of the United States in the erection of barracks and other temporary structures necessary for military purposes. The existing national emergency may substantially increase the demand of the Government for gypsum wallboard for similar military purposes."

Those indicted were:

National Gypsum Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and these officers: Melvin H. Baker, president, and Ralph F. Barley, vice president in charge of sales.

Arthur R. Black, sales manager of American Gypsum Co., Port Clinton, Ohio, a company named as a conspirator but not indicted.

Ebsary Gypsum Co., New York.

Newark Plaster Co., Newark, N. J.

Lath Involved

United States Gypsum Co. and Certain-teed Products Corporation were accused in a second indictment of conspiring to maintain a high price on perforated gypsum lath by means of licensing arrangements for use of a patent which they knew was void.

The indictment was signed by District Attorney Edward M. Curran, Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold, Grant W. Kelleher, special assistant to the Attorney General; George B. Haddock, Edward J. Hickey, jr., George W. Wise and Arthur S. Clark. All took part in the investigation which preceded the indictment.

Fishing, Says Baker

Buffalo, N. Y., June 28 (AP).—Melvin H Baker, president of the National Gypsum Co., one of five corporations indicted by a Federal grand jury in Washington today on charges of price fixing through a patent licensing arrangement, characterized the case as "a fishing expedition."

"Our general counsel informs me that we will have no difficulty," Baker said, "in defending any claims that the grand jury may find against us. Everything that we have done pertaining to pricing and competitive relations during the past 12 years has been done under the advice of counsel."

King Approves Formation of New Court in D. C.

Approval of the suggestion that a court of domestic relations be established in Washington to relieve the Juvenile Court of adult cases was expressed yesterday by Chairman King, of the Senate District Committee.

Commenting on the proposal of Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, Senator King recalled that he had urged creation of such a court several times in recent years.

Senator King indicated he does not intend to propose that the Senate District Committee adopt Senator McCarran's proposal that a broad social welfare investigation be made prior to any Senate action on the renomination of Judge Fay Bentley.

This is the first time in the history of the Sunset Symphonies that tickets will be on sale in Government buildings, Cappel stated. He said that arrangements have been made through the Welfare and Recreation Association to sell refreshments at the concerts.

Where There's Smoke—

Someone didn't extinguish a cigarette.

So one hook-and-ladder unit, six fire trucks, five motorcycle policemen, seven foot patrolmen and a patrol wagon sped to a street car platform at Twelfth and Pennsylvania avenue northwest yesterday afternoon.

Traffic was tied up for ten minutes while one fireman extinguished the blaze.

WED 60 YEARS—Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Strobel last night celebrated their sixtieth wedding anniversary at their home, 4406 New Hampshire avenue northwest

Four generations were present at the sixtieth wedding anniversary celebration of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Strobel last night at their home, 4406 New Hampshire avenue northwest.

Present were four sons and four daughters, 13 grandchildren, and 13 great-grandchildren, besides nearly two score friends. That they have reared a family of eight children without a serious illness is the source of greatest satisfaction to the couple.

The children are Charles A., Frederick W., John G., and Ernest E. Strobel, and Mrs. Mary E. Pettey, Mrs. Adelaine M. Grant, Mrs. Agnes Miller and Mrs. Virginia Coleman, all of Washington.

Strobel, 79, and Mrs. Strobel, 76, both native Washingtonians, recall many changes in the city since their childhood. Strobel drove horse cars on the old Belt Line until 1890 when he accepted a position with the Southern Railway. He retired as a locomotive engineer in 1938 after 48 years' service with the Southern.

Compulsory Blood Test Upheld In Cases of Disputed Paternity

Compulsory tests of the blood of the man, woman and child concerned, to obtain evidence in cases of disputed paternity, were approved by a 2-to-1 decision of the United States Court of Appeals here yesterday.

The court rejected the appeal of Mrs. Mary E. Beach, 18, 1048 Bladensburg road northeast, who was ordered to submit herself and her baby to a blood test by Justice Jesse C. Adkins of the District Court, last October.

More than a year ago, Mrs. Beach sued her husband, James E. Beach, 22, mechanic, 905 F street northeast, for maintenance for herself and her expected baby. Beach denied the child was his and asked for a divorce.

John Paul Jones, Beach's counsel, obtained the court order for the blood test, contending that it might give conclusive evidence in Beach's favor. The wife attorney, John T Bonner, attacked the test as against public policy, in a special appeal from the order.

Justice Henry W. Edgerton read the majority opinion denying the appeal, in which Justice Wiley Rutledge concurred.

Justice Harold Stephens, in his dissenting opinion, said he agreed that "one who asserts paternity and is met with denial thereof, ought as a condition of the right to relief, to be required to submit to such scientifically accredited tests as are likely to throw light upon the issue."

However, said Justice Stephens, "to compel a party to a civil suit to submit to a physical examination constitutes an invasion of a substative right," and the courts have not been given authority to compel such submission.

Commissioners Approve Capt. Carroll's Retirement

The Commissioners yesterday approved retirement of Capt. Patrick J. Carroll, commander of the United States Park Police. Proposed shifts in the Metropolitan Police Department also received approval.

Carroll, 59, will retire from active duty June 30 after 27 years of service. The board of police and fire surgeons recommended his retirement for physical disability. Frank T. Gartside, acting superintendent of National Capital Parks, said last night he had selected no permanent successor to Carroll.

Lieut. Henry Helms will continue as acting commander of the park force, he said.

At the request of Frank J. Wilson, chief of the Secret Service, the Commissioners authorized transfer of 19 Metropolitan policemen to the White House Police Force and at the same time approved appointment of 36 new Metropolitan rookies.

In approving promotion of Detective Sergt. Earl P. Hartman to lieutenant and retirement of Detective Sergt. Frank O. Brass, the Commissioners designated Precinct Detectives Preston C. Wheeler and Robert E. Talbot detective sergeants to fill the vacancies.

Other changes approved were:

Transfer of Capt. Harvey G. Callahan from chief clerk of the Police Department to command the First Precinct, to be replaced as chief clerk by Lieut. Lawrence R. Beall, promoted to captain.

Retirement of Lieut. John M. Roper, 27, for physical disability.

Retirement of Capt. John E. Bowers.

Grand Jurors Clear Capitol Policeman in Shooting of Boy

The District Grand Jury, whose membership includes three colored persons, unanimously decided that no jurisdiction exists for criminal prosecution of Vernon O. Deus, Capitol police sergeant, whose revolver accidentally shot a 10-year-old colored boy.

Announcement of the decision, a step rarely taken in connection with grand jury investigations, where proceedings are usually kept secret, was made by John W. Fihelly, assistant United States district attorney in charge of the civil division.

"The complete record of the case was placed before the District grand jury this morning and all witnesses whose statements have been taken were questioned for some time," Fihelly said. "After deliberation on the facts, the jury unanimously agreed that a criminal prosecution would not be justified.

"Since this investigation originated in the grand jury room and there has not been any information or warrant issued, the grand jury will not make a report in open court upon its action in this case. The policy of this office in ordinary cases is not to make an announcement. However, in view of the wide attention this case has received, we feel that in this announcement is required in justice to all concerned."

Kenneth Romney, House sergeant-at-arms and chairman of the Capitol Police Board, which suspended Deus after an investigation of the shooting said last night he did not know when the policeman would be returned to duty.

D.C. Planners Seek Sites For Buildings

Reynolds and Delano To Look at Locations Today for Offices And Heating Plant

Commissioner W. E. Reynolds, of the Public Buildings Administration, and Chairman Frederic A. Delano, of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, will set out today to find sites for a new Federal office building and a new heating plant. Technical experts of the commission and the PBA will go along.

First site choice of the PWA for its west central heating plant, which will be needed to serve the new War Department and other buildings in the "northwest rectangle," was on the Rock Creek and Potomac parkway, below K street. This spot was vetoed by the planners because the structure would mar the Potomac River view.

A. D. Calvert Is Heard

Except that the new office building is proposed for construction somewhere along East Capitol street, no decision has been made on the location. Both projects will require purchase of private property.

Just before adjourning their regular monthly meeting, the planners heard A. D. Calvert, president of the Northeast Conference of Citizens' Associations, request a number of capital improvements for East Washington, principally new bridges over the Anacostia at East and South Capitol streets.

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, District highway director, submitted preliminary plans for proposed bus and street car routings to serve workers in the southwest area's new Social Security Board, Railroad Retirement Board and Census Bureau buildings. The studies will be continued, with District and Capital Transit Co. experts collaborating, until definite recommendations are made at the planning commission's next meeting August 1.

Approved Parkway Contracts

The commission also:

Volunteered its cooperation in auto parking, five-year building program and water supply investigations ordered by Congress.

Approved approximately $50,000 in contracts for further land acquistion in Montgomery County, for development of the George Washington Memorial Parkway, as well as unnamed amount of commitments for parkway land on the Virginia side of the Potomac.

Reported progress in conferences with War Department engineers on flood control measures in the Anacostia Valley of Prince Georges County.

Democracy Calls For Discipline, Says Dr. Griffith

Dr. Ernest S. Griffith, dean of the American University Graduate School, told students of the University of Maryland summer school yesterday that "Democracy in France will die because Hitler cannot afford to let it live."

He blamed the weakness of France upon a political system which he termed "a shaking ship, held together by a makeshift government." The French system never permitted the possibility of a single majority party, he added.

"If the United States is to survive, we must have a great heightening of our emotional lives. We must be disciplined as never before," Dr. Griffith declared.

Alexander Heads Revenue Unit

W. S. Alexander, administrator of the Federal Alcohol Administration, which will be absorbed by the Treasury Department after today under a Presidential Government reorganization order, it was learned yesterday, will become supervisor for the Boston district of the alcohol tax unit of the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Red Cross Ship Reaches Spanish Port

McKeesport Carries $1,000,000 Cargo; D. C. Chapter Gets More Large Gifts

The American Red Cross mercy ship, McKeesport, arrived safely at Bilbao, Spain, yesterday, bearing a $1,000,000 cargo of foodstuffs and relief goods, national Red Cross headquarters here were informed by wireless.

At the same time the organization announced the war-relief fund reached a total of $16,365,909 in the drive toward a $20,000,000 national goal. The District chapter yesterday received two anonymous gifts—one for $3,600 and another for $1,000—besides a check for $1,000 from the Graduate Nurses Association of the District, which brought the local fund to $325,099.05.

Twenty-three huge packing cases of garments and surgical dressings were started on their way to Europe from the District chapter. Eight of the cases carried 1,546 items, including everything from layettes for infants to hospital shirts for wounded soldiers. The other 15 cases carried 92,276 surgical dressings, all made by volunteers at the District Chapter House.

A $25,000 contribution to the Finnish Red Cross was also announced yesterday by the national organization. The amount is to be used to help support any small emergency hospitals which have been established throughout Finland to care for wounded soldiers and civilians.

The sum of $3,000 was sent to Bowen McCoy, American Red Cross representatives at Bilbao, Spain, who had requested aid for stranded Americans arriving at the Spanish port.

Hull, Farley Confer, Mostly About Mail Censors, They Say

Secretary Hull said he had conferred at length yesterday with Postmaster General Farley, primarily about censorship and distribution of mail abroad.

The Secretary indicated that new negotiations were under way with belligerent governments for relaxation of censorship. British censorship of American mail long has been a thorny question between the two governments.

Hull said that politics was discussed only in generalities. However, the call of the Democratic National Chairman on Hull so soon after the Republican nomination of Wendell Willkie for President led to speculation on its possible political implications.

Hull has been mentioned as possibly President Roosevelt's choice for the Democratic Presidential nomination if the President should decline to accept a third nomination.

BALLERINAS, 10 AND 9—Charlotte Bovello, 10, and Barbara Owens, 9, will dance today in the war relief benefit show by neighborhood children in the backyard of Mrs. William McKenney's home, 331 Rittenhouse street northwest

Rittenhouse Street Children Follow National Trend in Putting Backyard Enterprise on Full Wartime Basis

By Scott Hart
Post Staff Writer

It's a wide movement—a strange American trend, this business of pity transcending lollypops.

The children aren't calling it "pity." They say "we wanna do something for the Red Cross." Then they go back to rehearsing, letting it go at that.

The Red Cross said yesterday it was happening in many places—children's shows and children's lemonade stands for the benefit of war sufferers.

Now it's started here, and soon some wounded soldier in Europe will be wearing a bandage because Barbara Owens, 9, acrobat, can do cartwheels; and because Eugenia Moore, 5, can sing "Home on the Range; because such tragedians as Bobby Schoenthal, 6; Jimmy Mitchell, 7, and others on the block will give the entire proceeds from their show to the Red Cross, while ice cream goes a-glimmering.

Wanting to drum up a crowd for the show, to be held at 1:30 p. m. today in the back yard at 331 Rittenhouse street northwest, the children held a press preview yesterday. The costumes from plumed hats to ballet dancers' tights, represented a sampling of the old trunks in all the houses of the block.

Previewers sensed some conflict in motif and sequences, such as when Eugenia sings "Home On the Range," shortly after the Tom Thumb wedding aspect of the program. But the children undoubtedly mean that Eugenia, the bride, and Jimmy Mitchell, the groom, will take up a home on the range, which makes it work out right, while the cartwheel spins by Barbara Owens will have some allegorical significance of the movement westward.

Even this is somewhat involved because a Cinderella play with trolls and fairies and flower girls gets sandwiched in, and one little boy complained that he hadn't been told what to do. Then, too, one of the players dropped out at the last minute. But the show will go on, children paying 5 cents, adults 10 cents, for admission. A large, chalked sign in the front yard says so, and the Red Cross gets a few more needed pennies.

Britons to Auction Library Treasures for War Sufferers

Britons have gone into their treasured libraries and brought forth cherished works for the auction block to help relieve war suffering.

According to present expectations, the sale, for benefit of the war's sick and wounded, will be held at Christie's Auction Rooms, in London, July 8. Announcement was by the British Red Cross.

Among important manuscripts are Byron's "The Waltz," original manuscript, given by Sir John Murray. "A manuscript of supreme importance, the first published edition of which is amongst the rarest of Byron's works," the announcement said.

Lord Rothschild has given a Shakespeare Fourth Folio. This embraces comedies, histories and tragedies, "published according to the true original copies, with which is added seven plays never before printed in folio. The fourth edition portrait by Martin Droeshout, with Ben Johnson verses beneath, four leaves remargined and occasional tears mended, otherwise a good, tall copy."

Col. F. D. Samuel has given for the auction an original edition of "Seven Pillars of Wisdom," by T. E. Lawrence, who led the Arab revolt for the British in the World War. It is described as the rare original edition, initialed by the author.

Two Kipling items will appear, the gifts of Lady Colefax. One is the original manuscript, "The Answer," signed in full and dated July 11, 1894. It was taken from Lady Colefax's autograph book. With this is an autographed letter of one page, signed "Ruddy," with envelope date-stamped July 13, 1894, addressed to "Mrs. Halsey," and an unsigned drawing in blue chalk.

Other important items of the sale include Kelmscott Press works of Geoffrey Chaucer, given by Mrs. Elspeth Grahame, and Barrie's "The Truth About Peter Pan" original manuscript, given by Lady Cynthia Asquith. The original manuscript of Somerset Maugham's "The Cosmopolitans" is given by the author.

In a letter to The Post announcing the sale, A. S. W. Rosenbach, of the Rosenbach Co., Philadelphia and New York, said, "I will cable at my own expense and execute without charge any commissions entrusted to me."

Slayer of Numbers Writer Held Guilty in Second Degree

Orlando W. Woody, 25, colored, was convicted of second degree murder last night for killing a numbers writer who, Woody said, welched on a $300 payoff. He faces a sentence of 20 years to life imprisonment.

Woody testified that he placed 50 cents on the number "711," which hit, and that the writer, Albert Alex Smith, 38, colored, refused to pay off the $300 winnings.

Woody found Smith sitting in an automobile in front of 2118 Sixth street about 6 p. m. on April 13 and demanded his money. They quarreled and a fight followed in which, Woody said, his pistol went off. A weapon was found on Smith.

Assistant District Attorneys Stephen P. Haycock and A. B. Caldwell prosecuted Woody. Defense counsel were James A. O'Shea and Alfred Goldstein.

O'Shea said any jail term would be a life sentence for Woody, because the man is seriously ill.

D. C. Leaders To Accept Van Hyning

Those Who Wanted 'Native Son' Agree To Appointment, Officials Declare

Because of his "excellent qualifications," yesterday's appointment of Conrad Van Hyning, of Ohio, as principal assistant welfare director will bring no further opposition from local leaders who sought a Washington man for the job, District officials said last night.

Those who led the fight for a "native son" in the post are convinced there is no District resident available with sufficient experience in welfare work to fill the position, said Welfare Director Robert Bondy.

Van Hyning's appointment was held up for nearly two weeks while Commissioner J. Russell Young combed the local field for a likely prospect. He reported "no luck" and recommended the Ohioan's appointment.

Pays $6,500 a Year

The position, paying $6,500 a year, was provided for in the 1941 Appropriations Act and Van Hyning will take his new post Monday. He was indorsed by Secretary of Commerce Hopkins and has had years of experience in welfare work, the Commissioners reported.

At the same time, a new appointment and three reappointments were made to the Board of Public Welfare. A. J. Driscoll, president of the Mid-City Citizens Association, is the new board member.

Those reappointed were Dr. H. J. Crosson, Edgar Morris and John R. Pinkett. Driscoll was named to fill a vacancy created by the recent resignation of Mrs. George L. Harrison, the former Mrs. Cary T. Grayson.

Has Wide Background

Driscoll was recommended for the position by Commissioner Young in recognition of his long service in local civic affairs.

Van Hyning, 40, has a wide background in newspaper, real estate and general welfare work. He was director of public welfare in Winston-Salem, N. C.; assistant executive director of the temporary relief administration of New York State; commissioner of social welfare in Florida and more recently, executive director of the Childrens' Service Center, Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

Answering agitation among District civic groups for the appointment of a local man to the job, Welfare Director Bondy told the Commissioners:

"Mr. Van Hyning is recommended for this position after a very careful canvass of all local possibilities as well as out-of-town people. The director of public welfare has consulted with those who are acquainted with available people and finds that there are none with the public welfare experience that this position should carry who are available in the community."

Points to Experience

"As the position entails the carrying of full responsibility in the absence of the director of public welfare," Bondy said, "and therefore a broad acquaintance with public welfare work, it follows that the holder of the position should be one of broad public welfare experience."

Bondy pointed out that Van Hyning has had considerable business experience and is capable of supervising Washington's various welfare agencies.

Crawford, March and Nimble Cast Score in 'Susan and God,' at Capitol

Adapted Stage Play Preserves Humor and Punch of Original; Two Stars on Stage

"SUSAN AND GOD." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the stage play by Rachel Crothers, adapted to the screen by Anita Loos, costarring Fredric March and Joan Crawford, with Ruth Hussey, John Carroll, Rita Hayworth, Nigel Bruce, Bruce Cabot, Rose Hobart, Constance Collier, Rita Quigley, Gloria De Haven, Richard O. Crane, Norma Mitchell, Marjorie Main and Aldrich Bowker. Directed by George Cukor.

Susan Trexel yesterday again returned from her tour of Europe aboard the Normandie and landed on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater to spread consternation and catastrophe among her Long Island set by an attempted application to their private lives of her "new approach to God."

BELL

This new panacea for social ills was picked up from Lady Wigstaff, foremost of the British "revolutionists," who has accompanied her home to spread the new creed of moral and spiritual regeneration to all and sundry. The idea is that a frank public confession of personal peccadilloes and marital and extramarital transgressions will bring peace to the soul and understanding and forgiveness to the awakened spirit of the injured. Coming from Susan, the most rattle-brained of the lot, this is a bit startling. It is even more so when she begins to apply the doctrine to the scrambled love affairs of a swanky house-party and encounters the stiff resistance of her dipsomaniac husband, who makes a bargain in behalf of their home and daughter which he is able to fulfill, but Susan is not, until it is almost too late.

Skillfully adapted from the comedy in which Gertrude Lawrence starred so successfully on the stage, the film version of "Susan and God" progresses from a smart conversation piece to a more serious mood that plumbs pretty deeply into the frailties of human nature and the fallibility of hair-brained "isms."

The most conspicuous virtue of "Susan and God," in its new manifestation, is that it affords Joan Crawford her most fruitful opportunity to date to demonstrate that she is an actress of parts, not dependent upon the wizardry of the make-up and costume departments for the means of impressing a perceptive audience. Susan, to be sure, is extremely well turned out in the picture, but Miss Crawford imbues her, too, with high humor, tender feeling and some emotional strength. How far she has departed from the typical "glamour girl" role is emphasized by the fact that she is cast as the mother of a 14-year-old daughter. This pivotal part is effectively played by Rita Quigley, who undergoes a great metamorphosis during the progress of the action. Fredric March in the ballasting character of Barrie Trexel brings greater naturalness and dramatic forcefulness to the role than it ever could boast on the stage.

The film has been produced in opulent fashion and shrewdly directed by George Cukor, who had an unusually competent cast under his discerning eye. Nigel Bruce, Ruth Hussey, Bruce Cabot, Rose Hobart, John Carroll and Rita Hayworth are among the foremost of the wastrels bitterly disillusioned by Susan's gratuitous ministrations. Constance Collier appears only briefly as the effusive dowager carried away by a new fad.

The new stage bill at the Capitol is notable for the inclusion of two feminine stars of top rank. Harriet Hoctor appears in two special ballet numbers, the first an exquisite thing of rhythmic grace and beauty; the second, a clever refinement of the Charlie Chaplin gaucheries, brought within the smooth cadences of the ballet. Miss Hoctor is supported by the Capitol's dancing ensemble and was cheered by a capacity house. Sheila Barrett, her co-star on the boards, scored an equal triumph in a group of impersonations that ranged from a "child prodigy" and her raucous mamma to a repetition of her "professional Southern girl." These two artistes have many imitators, but precious few equals—if any. Emil and Evelyn, gymnasts well out of the groove, and the Rhythm Rockets complete the living entertainment—save for Sam Jack Kaufman's vocalized overture and Art Brown's carrying-on at the organ.

'The Man Who Talked Too Much' Confuses the Issue at Earle

By Richard L. Coe.

"THE MAN WHO TALKED TOO MUCH." Warner Brothers picturization of a play by Frank J. Collins, adapted to the screen by Walter DeLeon and Tom Reed, costarring George Brent and Virginia Bruce, with Brenda Marshall, Richard Barthelmess, William Lundigan, George Tobias, Henry Armetta, John Litel, David Bruce, Clarence Kolb, Louis Jean Heydt, Marc Lawrence, Ed Stanley, Kay Sutton, Elliott Sullivan, Dick Rich, Phyllis Hamilton, John Ridgely, William Forrest, Maris Wrixon and Dana Dale. Directed by Vincent Sherman. Reviewed Friday afternoon at the Earle Theater.

In "The Man Who Talked Too Much" it is the Warner Brothers admirable aim to set forth the truth that crime does not pay—not even ever. The Earle's new film finds George Brent a poor but righteous assistant district attorney, makes him a rich and slimy shyster, puts him through the mill of inner heartbreak and finishes him as a cleaner, sadder human, still blest with brother, sweetheart and riches. Observed with cold realism, crime has it rewards.

Now, of course, this is not the conclusion the Brothers Warner wish their students to reach. To set them off the track, all sorts of anguish is introduced: an upstanding kid brother, on the spot for Brent's own offense; the doglike devotion of a beautiful secretary. All this—and heaven too—(Plug!) is flung in an observer's eyes to blind him to the ultimate reward which we can't forget. The lawyer still has the money.

He got it by the most reprehensible means imaginable. He had linked up with one of those gangs whose business it is to go about "protecting" people. He covered up thievery, murder, and was about to defraud the government when The Light was forced upon him. In his sleek office, fingering his fat bankbooks, he realized that he must bite the hand that had been feeding him. But he kept the money.

Virginia Bruce a Reward

To be sure, he was pummeled right and left doing it, shot while talking on the telephone and, in the final reel, underwent the most wretched recriminations for the enormity of his folly. His inner suffering must have been something immense, but he wound up with his brother alive and engaged to beautiful Brenda Marshall and, as for himself, had beautiful Virginia Bruce to hold his hand while recovering from gunshot. But he still must have had quite a neat bank account when all the bills were paid.

If we seem a trifle too obsessed with this crime-has-its-own-wee-reward theory, blame it on a film which has shot its bolt before and often. It has its moments of suspense—such as will the next scene be the way it always is, or will they change it a little? Apparently Warners weren't very much taken with the idea either, for the courtroom in the western Rocford County is remarkably similar to the one in New York. Brent is pretty serious about his problems but looks relieved when it's all over. Miss Bruce surely deserves some better lines. William Lundigan is natural enough as the youngster new to the legal shambles. And David Bruce, as the snake Gerald Wilson, has the meanest of human expressions.

Garfield Swift Scores

On the Earle stage things are more original and certainly far pleasanter. There's Clyde Hager with some broad sidewalk humor on how to sell potato peelers when the cops aren't looking. His brash humor, most delicately described as unsophisticated, is welcome relief from the established norm and we have a notion that his laughing audience found his humor almost too unexpected to applaud very much.

Then there's barytone Garfield Swift to sing three numbers from "Show Boat" very pleasantly and chant "Her Name Was Rosita" while the Roxyettes dance a Spanish fanderol. There are the Four Franks, a resourceful double brother-sister team, dancing, saxophoning and having fun with a "G. W. T. W." takeoff. John Gallus pipes, juggles and manipulates some miniature Roxyettes. Pert Eileen Ritter's "Sing-a-Song-With-Mike" feature highlights airs appropriate to Independence Day to which the audience subscribes with exceptionally lusty voice.

New York, June 28.

SOME NEW DEAL Democrats have launched a series of chain letters urging the President to accept a Third Term nomination. Anthony G. Neary, of Philadelphia, started such a chain asking the recipients to invite six friends to write to Roosevelt at the White House, and tell him that the American people want him, need him, and that he must respond to their call . . . Whether he wants to or not, the President must respond to the call sent by Miss Louise Hack, who received one of those chain letters in the devious course they took . . . Miss Hack is the chief of the White Houses switchboard, in charge of Roosevelt's phone calls.

THE NEWLY-CREATED post of Coordinator of National Defense, Washington believes, will be assigned to a businessman whose initials are D. N. . . . The book which was to be written by Fritz Thyssen—the man who sponsored Hitler and fled from Germany—will not be published. Simon & Schuster, who were making arrangements decided that Thyssen hadn't been so smart—and that, perhaps, the publication also would be a mistake . . . One of the passengers on the Clipper which brought Robert Montgomery back to America this week received no publicity because she was traveling incognito. She's Princess Baba, daughter of the Rance of Sarawak, and estranged wife of Bob Gregory, the wrestler.

BILL FIELDS, who manages Alexander Woollcott's lecture tours, wrote a letter to Warden Lawes, of Sing Sing Prison, asking permission for Woollcott to come to Ossining and inspect Lawes' dogs. The Warden, who had seen "The Man Who Came to Dinner," gave his permission. "But warn Woollcott," he added, "that if he breaks his leg up here, the only place in which I can put him up is the prison hospital."

FELIX BELAIR, White House correspondent for the New York Times and president of the White House Correspondents Association, is resigning from the newspaper. Belair will head an enlarged Washington bureau for the Henry Luce enterprises—Time-Life-Fourtune . . . The next copy of the Saturday Review of Literature will feature an article written in 1762. The author was Jean Rousseau; the theme, that no one man can rule the world; the title, "Why France Will Live Again." . . . Clifford Odets heard that one of his group theater stars, Elia Kazan, is appearing in the movie version of "City for Conquest." Odets asked: "Who wrote it—one of those men who's always lifting some of my lines for the John Garfield pictures?"

THE FIRST OFFICIAL reaction, in the New Deal group, to the activities at the Republican convention was made Wednesday afternoon, when Herbert Hoover's speech was published. A noted Democrat said: "Seven years out of the White House did more good for Hoover than four years in." . . . He rubbed his hands gleefully, and confessed that he's rooting for Willkie to win the nomination. "Because," he explained, "I know things about Willkie which can only be said about a man running for the Presidency."

PAUL SMITH, youthful editor of the San Francisco Chronicle, is one of Hoover's closest advisers. But Smith also has friends on the left—one of them being Harry Bridges, the West Coast labor leader. . . . Within the past year Smith and Bridges made a number of $50 bets—most of which were won by Bridges. When the Nazi-Soviet pact was signed, Smith wagered that Germany and Russia would be fighting side by side, before March, 1940. The editor paid. . . . When Russia invaded Finland, Smith wagered that the Soviet Union, if triumphant, would grab all of Finland. Although Bridges again won, Smith still may receive a rebate . . . Bridges was in New York a few days ago, but rushed back to San Francisco, to make some more bets with Paul Smith.

WHEN "Jupiter Laughs" opened in London, Dr. A. J. Cronin, the author, cabled his good wishes from the seclusion of his Beverly Hills home. His message read: "Very best of luck tonight, and God be with you, since I can't." . . . The United Press reported that John L. Heney, the city clerk at Trenton, N. J., had received a letter from Oliphant Davies, who professed to be the only ghost breaker in the world and who offered to dispose of Trenton's ghosts for a nominal fee. As a matter of fact, Davies is employed by Paramont's publicity department, to help publicize the new Bob Hope movie, "The Ghost Breakers." . . . "Lillian Russell," the movie, isn't thriving at the box office. Twentieth Century-Fox executives describes it as "Alexander's Ragtime Band, without an audience."

Make-up Spree Is Envisaged

Look for one of the biggest make-up sprees in Hollywood history when you see Cecil B. De Mille's Technicolor super-Western, "Northwest Mounted Police."

George Bancroft, Walter Hampden and Akim Tamiroff today are almost totally unrecognizable; Paulette Goddard, Lynne Overman, Lon Chaney, jr., and Francis McDonald are elaborately disguised.

Hampden, America's most distinguished Shakespearean stage star, actually changed the color of his eyes for the picture—the first time that has ever been done in Hollywood. He used contact lenses, which fit against the eyeballs, under the lids. A cavity in the center of each lid was filled with a brown fluid, concealing the blue of his own irises. As an Indian chief, Hampden also wore a built-up nose, false cheek bones, a long straight wig and dark face and body paint.

Bancroft's nose and cheek bones were built up, and he wore a wig hanging to his shoulders. Tamiroff wore neither beard nor false features, but by means of minute penwig, changed his appearance.

whose lusty humor is featured this week in the "Biff, Bang, Boom" stage revue at the Warner Brothers' Earle

In Hollywood

Hollywood, June 28.

Gene Tierney, the girl you'll be reading so much about soon, played on Broadway in "The Male Animal," is now doing her first pcture opposite Henry Fonda in "The Return of Frank James," and spent six months (at $350 a week) last year at Columbia and did nothing. When she begged for work, all she got was, "Go ahead, enjoy yourself. We'll send for you when we need you."

So when the six months term was over, she went back to Broadway, got in one of George Abbott's plays which failed, and then the part in "The Male Animal." She comes from Fairfield, Conn., the same State that gave background to Katharine Hepburn and Ros Russell. She went to school there, spent a year in Switzerland.

She's the only member of her family on screen or stage. Her only cloud of sorrow at present is that she couldn't attend her brother's graduation at Yale. But her 13-year-old sister went to the Prom and was the belle of the ball. Gene won't be 20 until November, but is wise enough to know you have to go to New York to get recognition—told me, "I'll spend six months a year on Broadway. I know it sounds silly, but I want to be a great actress some day—not just a capable one."

She showed me a letter from Eddie Dowling, who wrote her: "I'm so anxious to have you under my management. If you're free, I'd like to concentrate on a play for you. There's a real shortage of young ladies on Broadway, and an opportunity for someone like you to be the Helen Hayes of tomorrow. The danger of Hollywood is that one will over-stay, to the complete loss of the years when we should be learning this lovely art of ours. I'm writing with the hope that you are ready again for Broadway." She'd like to do one more picture, then a New York play.

Gene doesn't waste her time in night clubs. Likes to dance but thinks once a month is enough. When I asked about her romance with Dick Watts, who came West to see her, she said, "He's not a beau—only a friend."

She has great respect for Eddie Albert—thinks he could and should step into some of those roles waiting for Jimmy Stewart. Eddie's a terrific actor with great appeal—I agree with her. I don't think Warners have begun to realize his possibilities. He's not handsome, but the typical American boy, the kind you'd like to call "Son."

Gene goes to all plays, was depressed seeing only half a house when Maurice Evans played here, loved "Show Boat"—hadn't seen it before—wants to do a musical comedy. She sings a little. Thinks musical comedy would loosen her up, give her more freedom. She's revolving and bubbling over with ambition. Doesn't look as though she had a nerve cell working, but actually has a nervous tummy. She was so amused when being flouroscoped in New York—while the doctor was looking through her, he chuckled and said, "You remind me so much of Gertrude Lawrence."

Her best pals here are Laura Smith, with whom she went to school, and her brother's friends. Gene has a real spark, background, and an intelligent, wide-awake look in her eye, knows what she wants, and has courage enough to get it.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

(While Louella O. Parsons is on her Honolulu vacation, this column is being written by her daughter, Harriett Parsons, producer of "Screen Snapshots.")

Hollywood, June 28 (INS).—Alexander Korda, just back from London, announces that his next picture will be "The Conqueror," a historical drama, dealing with the conquest of Mexico by the Spanish explorer, Cortez. No one has been signed as yet for the title role, but Merle Oberon, Korda's lovely wife, will have the femme spot. She'll portray Marina, the beautiful Indian girl who was guide and interpreter for Cortez during his blitzkrieg on Mexico.

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

"The Conqueror" is Korda's second venture since transferring his production activities from London to Hollywood. His "Thief of Bagdad" is finished and awaiting a September release. The Cortez epic, which will be in full Technicolor, gets under way early this fall. Frank Beecham, English playwright, has already started work on the script and will be brought to Hollywood to complete the job.

If Alice Faye has any quarrel with Betty Grable for replacing her in "Down Argentine Way," she may get a chance to fight it out in front of the cameras in "Tin Pan Alley." This is only a tip—but a hot one. There's a plan afoot at 20th Century-Fox to bring the two blondes together in the Kenneth McGowan production, which is on the schedule as a Faye starring vehicle to follow "Down on the Wabash." "Wabash" will get the go signal as soon as Alice is able to work, and "Tin Pan Alley" is slated to follow immediately after—probably late this summer.

Getting around: Wallie Berry has bought 10,000 smackers worth of property on Jackson Lake, Wyoming (it's about 25 miles from Yellowstone National Park) and will spend a two-months vacation there after he finishes "Bad Man of Wyoming." He's having a landing field leveled off for his plane . . . and speaking of aviation nuts, Nancy Carroll, who was one of the members of that recent New York to Hollywood flying junket which force-landed Jackie Coogan and Roger Pryor in the headlines, will return to Broadway aboard a new stratosphere plane making a test flight. She'll go into a play, "Lot's Wife," to be produced by Victor Payne Jennings, who did Ethel Barrymore's "Whiteoaks" . . . Another map-hopper, Errol Flynn, hit Mexico City Wednesday and is getting the same mob acclaim he drew in South America.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at Random: Paulette Goddard is taking ballet lessons from Madame Nijinski; Bette Davis lunched yesterday with Van Heflin, who played opposite Hepburn on the stage in "Philadelphia Story." He's passing up several film offers to go on the road with the show; one of the feature races on the Charity Day card at Hollywood Park Monday is being tagged the De Havilland Handicap on account of it's Olivia's birthday; Mrs. Will Rogers took a group including Irvin S. Cobb, Will's great pal, to see "The Baker's Wife," now in its eighth week at the Esquire. Hollywood's arty set will probably jump down my throat for saying so, but I think the picture would be twice as good if it were half as long.

Deanna Durbin graduates from high school (on the studio lot) this month, but will continue a post-grad course with her sister, who is a public school teacher; Chester Morris lunching at the Brown Derby with Lilian Kenton, who's seen with him pretty regularly these days. She used to be the Chesterfield gal; Ricardo Cortez will do his first acting stint since he became a director when he faces the camera in "Charlie Chan in Washington." He'll take orders from Harry Lachman; Lynn Carver and husband Nick Nayfack are awaiting arrival from England of a 6-year-old girl whom they've agreed to take into their home for the duration of the war.

Lew Ayres is suffering from a painfully sun-burned back, but is being consoled by Elyse Knox; Mabel Todd's back in town after a seven-months' personal appearance tour and is talking contract with both Universal and Paramount; Wanda McKay is dividing her time between Marshall Duffield and John Howard; Mickey Rooney is really enjoying his work in "Strike Up the Band." Reason: There are 200 lovelies on the set. Mickey and his cocomposer, Sir Miller, have been running every big ork leader in town ragged with requests to play their latest tune.

That's all today. And who knows whether there'll even be a tomorrow. If there is, I'll be seeing you.

*X WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, JUNE 29, 1940 15

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Boston, Mass., June 28, 1940.

Mr. Clark Griffith, Griffith Stadium, Washington, D. C.

Dear Griff:

We see by the papers that you are recommending an "honor code" among the ball players to put a stop to the bean-ball and dust-off pitches which have been bouncing off batters' heads with great frequency of late.

POVICH

Tsk, tsk, Griff:

You say it could be handled by each club holding a meeting and pledging themselves to an honor code, not to be a party to the bean or dust-off ball. How long do you think that pledge would last, Griff? No longer, we assure you, than it took some pitchers to realize that they were in a hole and might get out of it by loosening the batter up. Not beaning him, you understand, just brushing him back with a high fast one underneath his whiskers.

We admit that baseball is a grand sort of game and the persons playing it are no less honorable than the folks in any other profession, but an honor code with regard to the dust-off ball is probably asking too much. You'll never make a lot of pitchers believe that they are not entitled to brush the hitters back from the plate a little. To them it's just as much a part of pitching strategy as the change of pace or let-up ball.

They're not necessarily vicious. Except in wicked cases which are known to the umpires as well as the players, they don't mean to hit anybody. If a ball does get away from 'em and beans a batter it's usually unintentional even if it was a brush-back ball. More batters are hit by wild pitches or balls that sail than by deliberate brush-off balls.

What does a pitcher think about when he's out there on the mound and in something of a spot with maybe the tying or winning run on base and in position to score on a hit. We'll tell you. Here's what he's probably thinking. He's saying to himself: "That big baboon at the bat is laying back for my fast one and wants to knock it out of the lot. He'll get nothing good from me. He's ruined me many a time, but not today, chum. He's crowding that plate too much, anyway. I'll brush him back a little. I'm not going to hit him, just scare him. I'm gonna waste a ball, anyway. If I walk him that's my tough luck. But I'm not gonna let him take that toe hold. I'll loosen him up."

Listen, Griff, we're not defending the bean ball. Like you, we're agin' it. But, unlike you, we don't think there's anything that can be done about it unless some sort of a stiff, automatic fine is levied against a pitcher who hits a batter. That would punish some innocent pitchers, of course, but it would be the lesser evil. At least, it would cause some hesitation on the part of the guys who are in the habit of using the brush-off ball.

We know there is a rule that permits the umpires to throw out of the game any pitcher he suspects of throwing a bean ball, but that is a silly sort of rule. How in heaven can an umpire tell whether a bean-ball pitch is deliberate or not. He'd have to be a mind reader and that brings up two ready answers: (1) That some pitchers have no mind to read and (2) how can an umpire tell what kind of a ball certain pitchers are throwing when the pitchers themselves don't have any idea where it's going.

Placing the ball players on their honor won't do either Griff. Most of 'em are nice fellows but we think you'd find most of 'em unperturbed if one of their pitchers used a dust-off ball to help win a tough game. Especially when it means world series dough. We think you will be asking too much of a pitcher to hold back his brush-off pitch if it is the means of keeping him in the big leagues and out of the bushes. We're agin' the bean-ball, as we were saying, but the temptation by the pitchers to use it in mild form is too great to permit the complete success of any honor code.

Especially, Griff, when it can be camouflaged so easily. Who can tell whether a ball that hits a batter has been deliberately thrown or was an accident. We've seen certain pitchers express the greatest dismay and concern after hitting a batter, but they didn't fool anybody. There isn't any "honor code" needed for a pitcher who doesn't use the dust-off ball and as far as the other type is concerned no mere honor pledge is going to keep him in line.

Wyatt Hurls Dodgers To a 2-1 Victory

Star Turns Back Bees With Five Hits to Register His Seventh Triumph; Errickson Loser in Mound Duel at Brooklyn

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, June 28.—Whitlow Wyatt outpitched young Dick Erickson today to bring the Brooklyn Dodgers a 2-to-1 victory over the Boston Bees in an eight-inning game halted by rain.

The Dodgers' star righthander held the Bees to five hits and struck out six in achieving his seventh triumph of the year.

Errickson was just as effective except for a fatal setup in the fifth inning, when Brooklyn bagged four of its seven hits and both its runs.

Peewee Reese and Cookie Lavagetto opened with singles, and, after Dixie Walker lined into a double play, Joe Medwick singled Reese home and Babe Phelps doubled to score Medwick.

Wyatt did not give a hit in the last four frames, and Errickson, who had won four games and lost only one prior to today, permitted none in the last three.

The only run Boston tallied against Wyatt developed out of an error in the second inning, when Phil Masi was safe on a high throw by Reese, went to third on a single by Errickson and scored on a force-out by Buddy Hassett. However, the Bees kept the Dodgers in an uneasy frame of mind by loading the bases in the first inning on two hits and an intentional pass and again in the fifth on an error and two walks.

Ken Overlin Soundly Beats Ben Brown

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., June 28.—Ken Overlin, of Washington, recognized as the world's middleweight champion in New York and California, gave Atlanta's Ben Brown a sound beating in a 10-round nontitle bout before 10,000 spectators here tonight but lacked the artillery to put the game Brown on the canvas.

Brown, 162 pounds, was able to land but few solid blows on Overlin, 161 pounds, rated the No. 1 middleweight challenger to Al Hostak by the National Boxing Association. These were concentrated in the fifth round, which the press

Fishing Grounds Near Martinsburg Suffer From Mud

Special Dispatch to The Post

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 28.—When anglers head for the rivers and creeks in this section tomorrow they are apt to find very unfavorable conditions for fishing, Game Warden T. K. Whitacre said today.

Whitacre said while many of the smaller streams and creeks, open for bass fishing, may be cleared by tomorrow to some extent, both the Shenandoah and Potomac rivers will be, in all probability, muddy.

Providing there is no more rain this week, Whitacre said, the Potomac might clear up for the week-end, but it will probably be some time before the Shenandoah will be clear enough for satisfactory fishing.

Tuscarora, Mill Creek and other tributary streams are now closed to all fishing and seining until the next trout season comes in, Whitacre said.

The open season on frogs will officially begin this evening and runs through August 11.

Stars Clash Today to Aid Red Cross Fund

Double Bill Is Scheduled At 2 o'Clock

Senate Beer Plays Sports Center and Brewers Meet Team Of High School Stars

By Bill Burnett

For years forced to waste their talents on vacant lots for the edification of stray dogs and broken bottles, the cream of Washington's amateur diamond crop steps out in a big league setting today when The Washington Post's "Sandlot Day" is staged at Griffith Stadium.

Two games, involving D. C. champions in softball and baseball, are on the program arranged by The Post for the sole benefit of the Red Cross war fund. And into the coffers of the D. C. Chapter is expected to pour proceeds from an anticipated crowd of 6,000 fans, each of which will pay 50 cents to view the sandlot high spot of the year.

Senate vs. Sports Center

At 2 p. m., following ceremonies in which the first ball will be thrown out by Earl A. Nash, chairman of the public relations committee of the local Red Cross chapter, actions gets under way with Senate Beer softballers meeting the Sport Center All-Stars.

An hour later the most attractive baseball clash of the season gets under way. The Heurich Brewers, District unlimited champions last year and first-half winners in the potent Post-Industrial League this season, meet a team of high school stars comprising the All-District schoolboy nine.

As kings of their respective branches of the game, Senate softballers and Heurich baseballers have the edge. Team members have played together for several years. And in addition, most of the players boast advantage in experience as well as age over their youthful foes.

"Underdogs" Not Worried

If the above facts worry the "softie" All-Stars or the Schoolboys, their practices this week haven't shown it. Vic Baratte, selector of the Sport Center crew, has sent his club through three special workouts and declared it ready and able to beat the best—which Senate happens to be. Morton Littman, 20-year-old coach of J. C. Flood nine, who volunteered his services with the Schoolboys, likewise considers his charges' prospects good.

The odd part of the whole program is that neither Senate nor the Brewers stand to gain by today's clashes, other than a chance to aid the Red Cross and prove their superiority. Either would lose considerable prestige in the event of an All-Star victory.

It's All for Red Cross

Players and coaches of all four clubs have contributed their talent without charge, as have umpires for both the soft and hardball battles. Griffith Stadium, too, will be used only because of the largesse of Clark Griffith, its owner. George Huber, former WMAL sports broadcaster, also has joined the effort to Cincinnati, June 28 (AP).—Gracyn Wheeler, of Los Angeles, seeded No. 2, routed Catherine Wolfe, defending women's single champion, from the Tri-State Tennis Tourney today with a 6—1, 6—2 victory that sent her into the semifinals. Miss Wolfe is from Elkhart, Ind.

Also advancing was Helen Bernhard, of New York City, who was pushed hard before defeating pretty Pat Canning, of Alameda, Calif., 4—6, 6—0, 8—6.

Dettweiler Beaten 1 Up in Western Golf

Milwaukee, June 28.—Dorothy Foster, young Springfield, Ill., golfer, defeated Helen Dettweiler, of Washington, D. C., the defending champion, in a quarter-finals match of the women's Western Open golf tournament here today, 1 up.

Two down at the turn, the 22-year-old Illinois stylist rallied on the incoming nine to earn the victory and the right to meet Babe Didrickson Zaharais, long-driving tournament favorite, in a semi-finals match tomorrow.

Mrs. Zaharais won over Georgia Tainter, 17-year-old Fargo, N. Dak., youngster, after a stiff battle, 3 and 2. Mrs. Zaharais was one up at the turn, carding a par 37 on the first nine.

Mrs. Russell Mann, of Milwaukee, defeated Mary Agnes Wall, Menominee, Mich., 1 up on 20 holes, in another quarter-finals match and will meet Beatrice Barrett, Minneapolis, in the other semifinals match tomorrow. Miss Barrett, 1938 champion, won from Janet Smith, of Rockford, Ill., 3 and 1 today.

Haverstick, Brooke In College Finals

It's North vs. South Today in College Golf at Manchester; Swarthmore Star Favored to Win Title

By the Associated Press

Manchester, Vt., June 28.—Harry Haverstick, of Swarthmore, appeared to have the 1940 National Collegiate A. A. Golf championship in his grasp today when he gained the final round by playing 31 holes in four under par against two capable opponents.

The Swarthmore senior, who eliminated Stewart (Skippy) Alexander of Duke, 3 and 2, and Bill Cordingley of Harvard, 4 and 3, will engage F. Dixon Brooke, of Virginia, in tomorrow's North vs. South 36-hole title match.

Brooke went four over par going 33 holes with Cary Middlecoff, of Mississippi, who bowed out of the quarter-finals, 3 and 2, and Eddie Foy, of Holy Cross, his 2 and 1 victim.

Much of Haverstick's success was due to his deadly chipping. He

Don Lash Wins 10,000-Meter Run at Fresno

By the Associated Press

Fresno, Calif., June 28.—Long-legged Don Lash, one-time University of Indiana endurance star now working as a State policeman in his home State, outran the field tonight to win the 10,000-meter run, opening event of the fifty-second annual national A. A. U. track and field championships.

His time was 32 minutes 29 2-10 seconds.

Lash, who tumbled records right and left during his college days, moved into the lead early in the grind—6 miles 376 yards and 4 inches. Before he broke the tape he had lapped the field, some of the contestants twice.

It was strictly a one-man race. The rest of the field straggled out, done in by the hot weather. The thermometer registered 88 degrees.

A slim crowd of some 3,000 fans in the 11,000-seat Fresno State College stadium turned out for the first night events, confined mainly to the junior division.

The 10,000-meter run, however, combined both seniors and juniors, due to the small field. The junior class is limited to those who have not won an event previously.

Lash set the senior A. A. U. record for the distance in 1936 with a clocking of 31:06.9.

Lou Gregory, of the Millrose A. A., New York, took second place and J. Rafferty, of the New York Athletic Club, was third.

Frank Lawrence, of the San Francisco Olympic Club, won the junior division crown, although he finished fifth in the race. His time was 38:12.6.

Gelbert's Bat AidsKnuckler In Victory

Travis Also Helps Cause; Dutch Gives Up But Seven Hits To Beat Bostonians

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent

Boston, June 28.—Dutch Leonard and Charley Gelbert, performing like a two-man gang, wrested a 4-3 victory out of the Red Sox today and lifted the Nats out of the cellar. The proceedings required 10 innings but the happy result was very simply achieved. Leonard simply held the Red Sox in the grip of some seven-hit-pitching and Gelbert slugged 'em for the important runs.

The 33-year-old shortstop who operated on wounded foot blasted by gunshot was a lively convalescent in Fenway Park today in the presence of 10,600 customers including 4,500 ladies' day guests. Whenever the Nats needed a run the veteran Gelbert banged it across the plate. He was doing that right down to the winning run in the tenth, which he produced with a two bagger against the left field wall.

When Gelbert wasn't driving runs across the plate for the Nats they weren't scoring many runs. In fact, it was he who swatted home three of their four runs—each time with a ringing hit to a different field. Two of his blows were doubles.

With Fenway Park's short left field staring the hitters in the face, Leonard didn't spare his knuckle ball but he was unable to hold a 3-2 lead in the ninth inning. He walked Ted Williams, first man to face him, and a sacrifice put Williams on second. On a wild pitch by Leonard, the tying run moved to third, and Joe Cronin deadlocked the game with vicious double against the wall in left.

Travis Is Great Help

Leonard returned to his pitching job to hold the Red Sox to a single run in the ninth with the help of Cecil Travis. The Nats' third baseman grabbed Desaulte's fierce grounder and threw out Cronin before the Boston Boss could retrace his steps to second base. The potential winning run reached second again when John Heving walked, but Travis grabbed Doerr's grounder for a force play.

Come to think of it, Travis was a considerable guy in the Nat's triumph. He put the winning run on base in that tenth with his third hit of the game. He singled into rightfield against Heving, who had succeeded Galehouse in the eighth inning, and Buddy Myer moved him to second with a sacrifice. Then it was that Gelbert banged a high fly against the scoreboard in left field for the double that won the ball game.

Leonard wasn't out of the woods

Cubs Defeat League-Leading Cincinnati, 3-2

Jake Mooty Hurls Six-Hit Ball as Mates Pound Paul Derringer

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, June 28.—The six-hit pitching of Jake Mooty led the Cubs to a 3-2 victory over the league-leading Reds tonight. Chicago batters jumped on Paul Derringer for 11 hits.

Cincinnati tried desperately to win in the final inning when Frank McCormick clouted a long fly to centerfield, scoring Lonnie Frey, but Mooty quenched the rally.

Stanley Hack pounced on Derringer, who was trying to run the Reds' winning streak to four games, in the first inning with a double to leftfield. Billy Herman, the next man up, singled to center, bringing Hack over the plate.

Singles by Dominic Dallessandro and Al Todd, a sacrifice and a bunt scored the other two Chicago runs in the second inning. Derringer stopped the Cubs there, but they had enough to win. Ival Goodman's single accounted for the first Red run.

Stealing Home Wins Going Away at Charles Town, Pays $6.60

Kirk Pilots Victor Home By 5 Lengths

Timber Storm Bolts, Crashes Fence and Is Destroyed; Jockey Escapes Injury

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., June 28.—Stealing Home, a middle-aged gray mare, ran away with the fifth race, the best offering on a featureless program today. The 5-year-old daughter of Happy Time gave her backers a good time and a $6.60 mutuel to boot after galloping to the finish line five lengths ahead of the nearest opposition. Mrs. J. B. Bond's Autumn Echo was second, a length in front of Mrs. E. C. Moyer's Balkanese, the last named anchored by 122 pounds.

The race was won in the heaviest portion of a passing mountain storm that turned the track from fast to sloppy in a few brief minutes. Stealing Home was clocked for the seven furlongs in 1:29 4-5, considered fair for the route.

Autumn Echo outran Stealing Home in the early stages so Jockey Carson Kirk, Silver Spring, Md., elected to rate his mount. After opening a gap on the backstretch, Autumn Echo began to fade and Kirk signaled Stealing Home for a drive. The mare responded by taking command and from that point to the wire the chief competitive interest turned to the battle for second money.

Jockey R. Haber escaped with bruises in an accident that marked the running of the first race but his mount, Timber Storm, was not as fortunate. The 7-year-old gelding and a consistent performer lunged through the fence soon after the start, broke his right, front leg and had to be destroyed. Hiblaze was the winner of this race in a duel with Never Home. Hiblaze paid $7.20.

Longshots supplied the winners in both ends of the daily double. Totty, owned by the Windsor Farm, was a surprise winner of the second event and paid $15.20. C. E. George's Goantell, Washington-owned, upset the calculations of the betters in the third race and supplied $53.60 to her backers. The double on the pair paid $250.20.

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

Jockey Sammy Palumbo did not take any mounts yesterday. He could have ridden in the late races but decided to rest up. He has been under the weather for some time but mapped out of it to ride three winners last Thursday. Jockey Hernandez is creeping up in the local riding race. His winner in the first event yesterday was his twenty-ninth of the meeting. E. H. Titmus, jr., whose luck has been running excellently, finally got the frown from Lady Luck yesterday. His Timber Storm, a frequent winner, went through the fence, broke his right front leg and had to be destroyed. Mr. and Mrs. John Manfuso and their children visited this track yesterday. Arrangements have been made to take the Bahr gate here to Marlboro after this meeting. Hagerstown will use the Puett gate. Two handicaps are scheduled here for Monday. Both are sprint affairs. Patchpocket, from the Bennings Stable, showed a bit of life yesterday and could be getting ready to win a cheap race. Little Dick Machado has the whooping cough, the poor kid. Danny Shea shipped in Lucky Jean and John Werring. The former came from the farm and the latter from Suffolk Downs. L. Crain will do the training. Glen Frye continues to divide his time between this track and Hagerstown in the interests of Stevens, Inc. He has installed a new bar at the Maryland track. This column is a little short on news today. Let's hope it will be long on winners. See you on the rail.

Bill.

First race—Small Devil has been having poor racing luck in the early stages of most efforts here. If this one can get away with the pack I believe we will cash. Chaste turned in one good race over this route and is dropping down. Travele is a doubtful starter, but would be a factor if in action.

Second race—High Rose was poorly handled last out and can beat these kind, barring mishaps. I'm going to string along. Navigation, on general good form, deserves attention. Red Idol will be a keen factor if taken off the reserve list.

Third race—Rise and Shine hasn't run that best race as yet. This could be the spot for a crack down and I'm going to try to be there. Sundrops seldom runs two alike. This one is better than generally rated. Veritas is in good form and will be close.

Fourth race—Gay Prank gets in with comparatively light weight. The outside post position will suit this one. Butterman is in slick hands and could surprise even with 122 pounds. Prosit for the minor award.

Fifth race—Bob Junior gets the rail position, steadying weight and may get an off track. This one has been a victim of poor racing luck and could win with the breaks. Dulie carries 132 pounds, but must be respected regardless of the crushing assignment. West Sea comes back after some good Delaware Park races.

Sixth race—Happy Miracle gets in this with 103 pounds and I believe that is light enough to assure victory. Frederick has been racing in improved fashion and is dangerous. Anya is another light weight with a chance.

Seventh race—Steppin In is stepping up several pegs. Just galloped along in front last out and could make it two in a row. Canimar will appreciate the marathon distance and is dangerous. Spotless deserves a money rating.

Eighth race—Gold d'Or was messed about as much as I have seen a horse at this meeting in that previous outing. May get clear sailing and take it all. Cora Kay's last was promising. Trostar is as good as those ailing legs.

Best bet—Rise and Shine.

In the third championship flight semifinal Mrs. R. C. Mitchell, of Washington, defeated Claire Wilson, of Baltimore, 5 and 4. She will meet Mrs. F. B. Robertson, of Baltimore for the title tomorrow at 9:20 a. m.

Mrs. Leo Walper, of Washington, won over Mrs. Harry C. Trace, Baltimore, 4 and 3 in the first consolation flight, and will play Gladys H. Greiner, of Baltimore, in the final tomorrow at 9:30 a. m.

Gustave Ring Files Racing Papers in N. J.

By the Associated Press

Trenton, N. J., June 28.—Articles of incorporation were filed with the secretary of state's office today by the Jersey Turf and Jockey Association, Hackensack.

The association was capitalized with 2,500 shares of common stock without par value. Its main purpose, the group's incorporation papers said, was to operate a track and run horse races.

Incorporators were Gustave Ring, 4915 Thirtieth street, Washington, D. C.; Charles W. Williams, Glyndon, Md.; Walter H. Donovan, 5303 Midwood avenue, Baltimore, Md., and Vincent F. X. Carlsen, Parkway, Harrington Park, N. J.

Ring was listed as owning 57 shares of stock, and each of the three other incorporators one share apiece.

Catcher, 'Too Good To Warm Bench,' Is Shipped by Newark

By the United Press

Newark N. J., June 28.—Because he is "too good to be kept idle," Ken Sears, second-string catcher of the Newark Bears, was optioned today to Norfolk of the Piedmont League.

Sears, 21 and son of Ziggy Sears, National League umpire, hit .349 for 25 games this season with the Bears, winning several games with his pinch-hit clouting. But with Tommy Padden doing the regular catching, Ken was forced to sit on the bench.

Manager Johnny Neun, believing that such idleness would be bad for Sears' future, sent him to Norfolk where he can develop.

2-Way Tie Recorded In Two-Man Tourney

Bogart and McAleer, Miller and McCarthy Deadlock at 67's in Qualifying Round of Capital Club Invitation; Play Continues Today

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

District Amateur Champion Ralph Bogart and the city's best southpaw golfer, Earl McAleer, finished in a two-way tie for medal honors with Columbia's well-known duo of George F. Miller and Martin F. McCarthy with 67's in the qualifying round of the Capital Club Invitation Tournament yesterday. The event is the first two-man team tourney here in years.

The three under par totals of the co-medalists topped a field of 30 teams. Six teams with 73 totals played off for the last three places in the championship flight in the best ball event.

Bogart and McAleer dropped six birdies between them but missed par on three holes to beat regulation figures by just three shots. McCarthy and Miller were more consistent, with three birdies and 15 pars.

One of the three dangerous combinations from the host club, George Molloy and Pat Martino, posted a 68, the only team at that figure, with two nines of 34. The Molloy-Martino duo dropped five birdies but missed par figures three times.

Nee-Steward Fail

One of the pre-tourney choices, the Columbia team of Maury Nee and Luther Steward, jr., surprised by failing to make the championship flight. Both Nee and Steward were within a stroke or two of 75 but they got their birdies and bogeys together.

Bobby Donohue, after playing 36 holes in the District Junior championship, left Woodmont at 4 p. m. and he and Manor Club champion Dick Meyer made the grade with a 72, bucking the afternoon storm and finishing just before dark.

Two rounds of match play are scheduled today with the co-medalist teams favored to advance to the semi-finals. However Capital has two dangerous combinations in the championship flight in addition to Molloy and Martino in Frank White and Billy Houghton and Bill Pendergast and Henry Cohen.

In an attempt to bring the tournament back to the standard of former invitations here and make it an annual affair, the committee was host to the players in a dinner last night following the play. In addition to the first flight, two flights of eight will compete today and tomorrow for the attractive prizes.

Houghton Sets Mark in Meet At Beaver Dam

Host professional Al Houghton set a new course record 68 yesterday at Beaver Dam and carried three members into a tie for first place in the pro-senior tournament with 66's Houghton's partners were Jess Baggett, Forest Thompson and N. E. Rogers, all who helped him by two shots. The other team in the deadlock was Leo Walper and P. W. Calfee, a senior from Washington Golf Club.

Houghton, shooting his second 68 in as many days, put the second one down in the competitive record book as a new mark since the course was changed. However, he needed the record total as Beaver Dam mentor Cliff Spencer was only a shot back with a 69 for second money in the pro sweepstakes.

Walper matched par figures with a 72 while other pro scores included Tony Penna, Dayton, Ohio, 73; Bob Barnett, Chevy Chase, 73; Lewis Worsham, Burning Tree, 76; Mel Shorey, Indian Spring, 76, and Tommy Doerer, jr., East Potomac, 78. George Diffenbaugh returned no card.

Sammy Snead Gets Revenge; 'Wrecks' Spring Hill Course

Philadelphia, June 28 (AP).—Sam Snead came back today to the scene of his disastrous blowup in the 1939 National Open Golf tourney and set a record of 64 over the Spring Mill course of the Philadelphia Country Club.

On the eighteenth hole where he took an awful eight to let the Open slip from his grasp, Snead shot a birdie 4 to give him and his partner, Ben Hogan, a 4 up victory over Ed Oliver and Gene Sarazen in an 18-hole best ball exhibition. The match grossed $1,800 for the French war relief fund.

On the long par 5 eighteenth Snead hit a long drive. His second landed in a trap on the side of the green, but he blasted out to within 4 feet of the cup.

Sarazen went around in 71, Hogan in 72 and Oliver in 75.

Mrs. R. Hotze Wins Ladies Day Tourney

The weekly ladies day golf feature at the Washington Golf and Country Club yesterday was a 18-hole medal play tournament in which low gross was won by Mrs. R. E. Hotze with a 90.

First low net was taken by Mrs. Marian Falls 97—18—79. Second was Mrs. Douglas Tschiffely, with 85—13—82, and third was Mrs. J. R. Hogan, with 118—36—82.

Cassedy Wins Junior Title In Big Upset

Blair High Golfer, Virtually Unknown, Beats Bob Donohue

Bill Cassedy, a 17-year-old golfer who has been playing the game five years and never had a lesson, turned in one of the biggest upsets in District Junior history yesterday by winning the title at Woodmont.

The Blair High School junior, representing the Argyle Club, defeated Bob Donohue, of Indian Spring, 2 and 1, in the 18-hole finals yesterday afternoon after scoring a 22-hole upset triumph over medalist and favorite George Vass, of Kenwood, in the morning semifinals.

Cassedy spurned his high school golf team for baseball the past spring and thus entered the tournament with little or no reputation. He had played little tournament golf and was completely overlooked in the pretourney ratings.

He wasn't given much chance against Vass and was 3 down at the end of nine. However, on the back nine Bill went to work and won four holes, to lead 1-up at the eighteenth. Vass won that hole to square the match and send it into extra holes. They halved the first three and then Cassedy won with a par 4 on the twenty-second to a 5 for his opponent.

In his semifinals Donohue defeated Buster Mrstik, 1 up, when the later stymied himself on the eighteenth and then knocked Donohue's ball in the hole in an attempt to negotiate the stymie.

Cassedy led Donohue two up at the end of eight holes in the finals, but Bobby chipped in on the eighth for a birdie deuce and won the ninth with a par and they turned all even. The new champion rolled one in from the green for a par on the tenth and won the twelfth hole to go one up.

Donohue saved the fourteenth and fifteenth holes with remarkable recoveries, knocking one right next to the cup out of a trap on 14 and dropped a 25-footer for a halve on the fifteenth. It looked like he would win the sixteenth and square the match but Cassedy's putt left him a direct stymie and they halved the hole. Again on the seventeenth Cassedy's approach shot directly stymied Donohue's putt for a win and then Donohue stymied himself by playing short and lost the hole and the match.

Mid-Atlantic Net Tourney Opens Today

Defending Champion Barney Welsh heads a field of 64 entries who will start play in the Middle Atlantic Tennis Championships at Columbia Country Club today. First matches will be at 2 o'clock.

Welsh, also holder of the 1939 District title and the 1940 City of Washington crown, is followed in ranking by Hugh Lynch, finalist in last year's tourney; Davie Johnson, 1939 City of Washington titleholder; Alphonso Smith, Dick Murphy, Bill Breese, Lieut. James Farrin and Ralph (Buddy) Adair, all consistent quarter-finalists, at least, in local tournaments.

The field, as usual, is dominated by District players. This, officials point out, does not cheapen the tournament, however, since almost all the outstanding players in the Middle Atlantic area live here. There is not a player in the area, they claim, who can beat any of the first five seeded stars.

Among the better out-of-town entries are Morton Shapiro, Dever Hobbes, Elwood Hoffecker and Herman Goldberg, of Baltimore; John Braggiotti of New York, and Ray Keenan, of St. Louis.

Senate Ten Drops Close Game to I.B.M.

District Softball Champions Lose 3-2 Verdict at Ballston

With their star pitcher on the sidelines for the first six innings, Senate Beer softballers bowed, 3-2, to their bitterest foe, I. B. M., last night at Ballston Stadium before a crowd of 1,000.

Abe Rosenfield, resting up for his featured role in the Red Cross sandlot double-header at Griffith Stadium today, didn't go into action until the seventh—and then it was too late. Two I. B. M. runners were on base at the time and Senate was holding a scant 2-1 lead.

A wild pitch by Rosenfield moved both runners up a notch, and then Berry's grounding out was sufficient to score Franke from third. A bouncing single by Smith, batting for Cole, a moment later, gave I. B. M. its final advantage.

To Temple Jarrell, I. B. M. hurler, went credit for a three-hit performance, though he weakened badly toward the end. As a matter of fact, there were Senate runners on second and third in the latter's half of the seventh when Ralph Wellens flew out to short field to end the game.

Vic Levinson, starting for Senate, allowed I. B. M. its other run in the first inning and from there until the seventh held things fairly safe. Of the six safeties registered off him, second Baseman Bauer was responsible for two. Ralph Wellens had the only extra base blow of the game in the sixth as Senate overcame a 1-0 deficit and went into a 2-1 lead on three successive I. B. M. errors and a pair of sacrifices.

Miss Echols Wins Tennis Championship

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, June 28.—LaJeanne Echols, of 6 Leighton ave., Silver Spring, Md., won the under-15-year girls' singles tennis championship at Suburban Club today, defeating Julie Fiske, of Arlington, Va., 1—6, 6—4, 6—4.

In the under-18-year event the 1939 Middle Atlantic doubles team of Anne Cullen and Betty Jacob, both Washington, went down to an upset defeat at the hands of Lucia Lhamon and Lucy Tyler, Annapolis duo, in a semifinals match, 6—3, 6—4. The losers had been first-seeded.

Tourney play will be completed Monday.

Hassett Shows Excellent Form

Philadelphia's heavyweight hopeful Irish Danny Hassett breezed through a public workout yesterday at Turner's Arena, and at the drill indicated he would have no trouble knocking off Bill Boyd in their ten-round match Monday night at Griffith Stadium.

In this respect, Irish Danny was ably supported by his nationally famous manager-trainer, Pete Moran, who said, "My boy will be fighting Mello Bettina on July 29 at your stadium."

Hassett, 26 and a rugged-looking battler with curly sandy hair, appeared in much better condition than when he crushed Buddy Scott in his debut at the Arena a few months ago. At that time, Manager Moran pointed out, Hassett had trained only four days. Today he has behind him two months of steady drilling and has taken on 8 pounds. Hassett weighed 188 pounds yesterday and probably will spot the sailor around 10 pounds.

"Danny has been working on a powerful body punch," Moran said. "And I know for a fact Boyd doesn't like 'em down there. That's the way Dorazio beat him in Philadelphia. But Danny also has a corker of a left to throw at Boyd."

Boyd didn't show up to complete his training at the Arena. Heinie Blaustein, training the former Gob in Baltimore, had promised to bring him over, but Max Waxman, his manager, turned "thumbs down" on the plans, saying "Boyd is better off training in Baltimore—I don't want to break up his routine. In Baltimore he has Red Burman, Johnny Kapogich and Al Levy to work with—and he does his road work by the seashore."

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Convention Hall, Philadelphia, June 28.—Our favorite statesman, Walter Johnson, whose militant stand on trade relations is that it is unconstitutional to prohibit the New York Yankees to make trades this year, put in an appearance at the Republican Convention yesterday.

CONSIDINE

The boys who are running the show found a slightly-too-small baseball cap for him, handed him a nickel rocket and led the big, humble guy up to the dais, which sticks out over the sweating delegates like Mussolini's jaw. Joe Martin, the master of ceremonies of this show, introduced him and then held up Walter's fire-hose right arm—the one with the ball in it.

Everybody cheered, including the hard-of-hearing delegates who querulously cackled through the din, "What did Joe say the young man's name was?" The chairman of the current events committee of the party's progressive bloc shook hands with Walter after he was led away from the microphone and beamed. "You're sure pitching some great ball for the Washington team this year, Walt."

In case you do not know why the old ball player should be here, waving to the delegates in that funny hat, then you are not abreast of the terrific political upheaval which recently took place down in old Montgomery County, Maryland, just north of the "you-all" territory and due west of the "she' 'nuff" district. Old traces have been kicked over a shining knight who wears no man's collar, not even his own, has risen from the soil—with the aid of a slight and pardonable lift from the old party machine down that way.

Running on a fearless "I'm not a bad sort" platform, Johnson won the Republican nomination for a seat now thoroughly covered by a New Deal Democrat named Byron. It was a tough haul for Johnson, and things looked dark when a family of three he was counting on had to stay indoors with a chicken pox quarantine. But virtue triumphed in the end and Johnson squeezed through with the nomination. It didn't disturb him a bit, for he spent most of his life pitching 1-0 ball games.

Johnson was the ideal baseball employe—obedient, kind, cooperative, honest and a horse for work. He should make an equally valuable Congressman. None of the political writers from Johnson's district can remember whether or not he made a speech in behalf of his nomination, but all are sure he'll not make one in the House of Representatives. Nor will he ungratefully toss off the reins of the men who put him in there and start reading scandalously liberal Washington columnists and begin acting independent. Once upon a time Walter threatened to jump to the Federal League because the Washington owners got sore at him for winning only 22 games the previous season. But he soon realized how much of an ingrate he would be to take a better offer from another league after his disgraceful season. He came back humbly to the American League.

Bensinger and Wadden Take City of Washington Doubles

New Champions Turn Back Gottlieb, Fisher In Finals of Annual Event at Columbia Club

Red-thatched Bobby Bensinger, national indoor boys' champion from Takoma Academy, yesterday won the first of two titles he sought in the City of Washington Junior Tennis Tournament when he teamed with Tom Wadden to capture the doubles crown in straight sets at Columbia Country Club.

Bensinger and Wadden, the top-seeded team, defeated second-ranked Eli Gottlieb and Ben Fisher, of Roosevelt High School, 6—4, 7—5, 6—3 in a match which, though stubbornly fought, was seldom in doubt.

An upset was recorded in the finals of the boys' division doubles when the top-seeded combination of G. Bache Gill, jr., and Delos Smith were routed, 6—0, 6—1, by second-seeded Peter Fratt and Don Forman.

Bensinger, holding the net to score repeatedly on overhead shots while Wadden was keeping their opponents from the net with his blazing service and booming forehand, was easily the star of the junior match. Much the classiest performer of the four, Bensinger's steadiness counter-balanced the mistakes of the more spectacular but erratic Wadden.

Bensinger, who won the City of Washington boy's championship last year, will be a slight favorite over Wadden, the University of North Carolina freshman star, in their junior singles final at 11 a. m. today.

An hour earlier, second-seeded Sam Doyle and dark horse Jack Timothy will meet for the boys' title in what should be a cracka-jack match. En route to the finals Timothy, diminutive entry from Army Navy Country Club, accounted for two seeded players, second-ranked Ned Sacks and Defending Champion Peter Fratt.

Guernsey Gains Semifinal

By the Associated Press

Haverford, Pa., June 28.—Defending Champion Frank Guernsey, of Rice, and Bill Talbert, of Cincinnati, advanced to the semifinals of the National Intercollegiate tennis championships today.

Just before a downpour of rain forced postponement of the two other quarter-finals matches, Guernsey defeated Bill Canning, of California, 6—3, 6—1, while Talbert eliminated Ted Schroeder, of Southern California, 6—4, 6—4.

After waiting for more than two hours Referee Charles Beard postponed until 9:30 a. m. (E. S. T.) tomorrow the scheduled matches between Isadore Bellis, of Pennsylvania; and Joe Hunt, Navy, and top-seeded Don McNeill, of Kenyon, and Bill Reedy, of Southern California.

Mrs. Frank Murray and Mrs. T. J. Winkler with 108-27—81, yesterday won a Scotch foursome tournament at Congressional Country Club. Mrs. C. E. Flawson and Mrs. T. G. Awalt were second with 99-17—82. Low gross was won by Mrs. R. L. Rose and Mrs. G. E. Stratmeyer, who carded a 94.

O'Brien Undergoes Appendectomy; Star 'Resting Well'

Delafield, Wis., June 28 (AP).—Davey O'Brien, All-America quarterback with Texas Christian University in 1938 and a member of the Philadelphia Eagles pro football team last year, underwent an emergency operation for appendicitis today.

Attendants at Waukesha Memorial Hospital said O'Brien's condition was "good."

O'Brien was a counselor at the St. John's Military Academy summer school.

N. I. C. B. Notes Sharp Upturn In New Orders

By the Associated Press

New York, June 28.—New orders received by manufacturers in May rose to a new high level for the year, the National Industrial Conference Board said today.

Shipments remained close to the rate in April and March, the board said, while the value of manufacturers' inventories showed little change for the fourth consecutive month.

Most pronounced gains in orders appeared in electrical equipment, iron and steel, machinery and nonferrous metals.

The board said the sharp rise in new orders since March, unaccompanied by a proportionate rise in either production or shipments, indicated a considerable advance in the backlog of manufacturers' unfilled orders.

The board is a research group maintained by business organizations.

Retail Trade Up in Week

New York, June 28 (AP).—The industrial East and Middle West recorded new substantial gains in retail trade this week, Dun & Bradstreet reported today in its weekly review.

In the East the improvement was estimated at 6 to 15 per cent over last year, while the West averaged increases of 10 to 20 per cent.

Consumer buying slackened in some other districts, said the review, because of cool weather and rain. Particularly affected were sales of light apparel, beach wear and sports wear.

"Year to year comparisons in the various regions," the review added, "were affected both by the weather and by the fact that the corresponding 1939 week was a relatively active one.

"The margin of increase over a year ago for the whole country was 4 to 9 per cent, as against a 6 to 11 per cent increase last week."

Wholesale activity was reported broader. It was pointed out there was still a brisk demand for summer apparel, beach wear and accessories, and reorders of other summer merchandise were fairly heavy.

Slight Drop Noted In Auto Assemblies

Detroit June 28 (AP).—Ward's Automotive Reports in its weekly survey of automobile plant activity today estimated that car and truck assemblies this week would total 87,550. Assemblies last week numbered 90,060; a year ago this week they totaled 70,663.

The tendency toward lighter schedules, the survey said, will be accentuated next week when the Fourth of July holiday will result in most plants operating on three-day schedules.

"Retail sales, meanwhile," it added, "are reported stronger in the belief that higher prices will be seen next fall."

Exchange Market

New York, June 28 (AP).—Sterling tumbled 3 cents today, losing exactly half of Thursday's fast run-up.

The relapse forced the free pound to $3.87, or roughly 15 cents away from the price of the official pound.

Foreign money dealers said the decline appeared due to confusion regarding details of steps Great Britain is taking toward complete elimination of the free market. It was understood, however, extensive progress has been made toward this end in the last few days.

The Canadian dollar lost 2 cents at 83¼ U. S. cents in sympathy with sterling. The Swiss franc is unchanged.

G. O. P. Choice Inspires Brisk Stock Upswing; $1 to $4 Gains Prevail Despite Late Reaction

New York, June 28.—The G. O. P. choice of Mr. Willkie and the Presidential nominee's declared resolve to restore unity and economic health to the Nation, brought favorable responses from investor and business groups today. Confidence was expressed on every side that strong, forceful and intelligent leadership has been assured for the fight to get private enterprise out of jail.

An immediate reflection of the swift rise of hope throughout the country was to be found in that highly sensitive indicator—the stock market. Share prices started out with unwonted strength and to the accompaniment of active trading under leadership of utilities.

Reaction Cuts Gains

Quotations went up fast for a time until more conservative ideas prevailed when corrective movements occurred. The close, however, found stocks up 1 to 4 points on a broad front with turnover for the day 1,173,100 shares. The composite price of the 100 stocks was 0.49 point higher.

Under the circumstances it was natural that stock of the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation should enjoy popularity, although Mr. Willkie quits the company for his new role as national leader and his candidacy is nowhere regarded as inferring preferential treatment for any form of business. Commonwealth & Southern common, most active issue of the session, opened on 75,000 shares at 1⅝ up ⅛ and after recording a new high at 1¾ dropped back to the opening level for the last transaction. Turnover in the issue totaled 147,300 shares.

Utilities Are Active

Other utilities, many of them in the small-price category, were included in the most active group, including United Corporation, Columbia Gas & Electric, Electric Power & Light, North American, American Water Works, Engineers Public Service, American Power & Light and Consolidated Edison. Of these, Engineers, American Water Works and United opened on 10,000-share blocks; North American on 9,000 shares and Columbia Gas on 8,000 shares. All were well up at the finish.

Gains in the steel and rail equipment sections while including stocks which have been prominent recently because of war and national defense prospects, also reflected overnight announcements of rail equipment buying programs of about $18,000,000. Bethlehem Steel was up more than 2 points, and Steel common 1¼. American Car & Foundry and American Brake Shoe improved 2 points or more each.

Some of the strictly investment issues got a good lift, including American Telephone, up 2¾ net. Western Electric added 2 and others to advance 1 or more included American Smelting, American Can, International Nickel, Johns-Manville, Public Service Co. of New Jersey, Sears Roebuck and Union Carbide. General Motors and Packmotive shares, the former being up a small fraction, while Packard eased a trifle.

Bonds Also Buoyant

Like all others in the financial district, listed bond traders and inard were the most active of autovesttors in senior securities took courage today from the nomination of Willkie, and better prices were the result. Gains appeared in United States Treasury issue, most foreign dollar bonds, and almost all speculative issues of domestic origin. Speculative utility bonds and rails were leaders of the upswing, which was well maintained throughout the session. Trading amounted to $5,350,000.

The more volatile issues that stand to benefit most from a change in Washington of the nature indicated by the nomination advanced from fractions to 3 points. Convertible bonds shared broadly in the gain, and holding company securities were stimulated. Communications did well and other issues likewise advanced.

High-grade investment securities were in good demand. United States Treasury obligations were up around half a point, intermediate maturities being in better demand than long-dated issues. Best rails and industrials were less affected, but also good.

Canadian and Australian bonds rallied sharply in the foreign list. German and Italian bonds were steady to firm, and issues of the occupied countries held their ground. The Latin American group was better under the leadership of Argentines.

Errors Help Yanks Beat A's, 4 to 1

Bucky Ross Is Defeated First Time

Four Bobbles and Keller's 13th Home Run Bring Victory To Bronx Bombers

By the Associated Press

New York, June 28.—Pitchers have lost heartbreakers before, but the first defeat of the season for Lee (Bucky) Ross, of the Philadelphia Athletics, today, 4 to 1, to the New York Yankees, was about as painful as any.

Ross held the world champions to six scattered hits, one of them Charley Keller's thirteenth home run, but he was undermined by four errors and some generally loose play that did not creep into the records.

Keller's home run came in the first inning and was followed by a double by Joe DiMaggio and a walk that didn't mean anything. Ross didn't give another hit until the sixth and himself batted in the tying run for Philadelphia in the fifth with a single after Sam Chapman had doubled.

But an error beat him in the seventh and two more piled on the woe in the eighth.

Babe Dahlgren singled to start the seventh and was forced by Pitcher Marius Russo, who was able to steal second because of a bad throw, and was sacrificed to third by Frank Crosetti. Then Red Rolfe tapped an easy grounder to Dick Siebert at first and instead of being the third out was safe on Siebert's fumble whileRusso scored.

With two out m the eighth Bill Dickey beat out a hit to Siebert and scored on a double by Joe Gordon. Al Brancato threw wild to Catcher Frank Hayes trying to nail Dickey and Gordon proceeded to third on the play. He scored on a wild pitch and Dahlgren was safe at first on a fumble by Benny McCoy before the inning ended.

Rain, which started falling during the Yankee uprising in the eighth, delayed the game for 40 minutes in the first of the ninth and cooled off a final threat by the A's. They got three of their nine hits and filled the bases in this frame, but Hayes hit into a double play when play was resumed.

East-West Net Play Postponed

By the Associated Press

Sewickley, Pa., June 28.—Torrential rains today washed out the opening matches of the East-West tennis tournament, postponing until tomorrow the two singles clashes that inaugurate the fifty-first renewal of the court classic.

The tournament, unless the weather intervenes again, will now run through Monday, with doubles matches Sunday and singles again Monday.

Nobody Doubts You, Buck—It Really Was 10 Straight

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Ten—count 'em—victories in a row is th eachievement Buck "Showboat" Newsom, Detroit hurler, is boasting about in this photo. The tenth came Thursday night over the Browns, the only club able to beat the big right-hander so far this year. The pugnacious glare is for unbelievers until Williams lined out to Lewis in the tenth. With two out, Jimmy Foxx slammed a double to the wall in deepest center only 3 feet short of a home run and again the Sox had the tying run on second, but Williams who was hitless all day, was no help to Boston.

The Red Sox tossed four errors into the proceedings and one of them—a lid throw by Third Baseman Jim Tabor—contributed to an important Washington run in the seventh inning, but to go back to the beginning, here's what happened: Cecil Travis doubled to center with one out in the second inning and with two out, Gelbert rifled a single to right to set the Nats up in a 1-0 lead. They made it 2-0 after two were out in the fourth. Myer singled sharply through the box and scored all the way from first base when Gelbert banged a double to center on which Cramer failed to make a shoestring catch.

Boston Scores

Boston's first hit was a fourth-inning triple by Cramer off the wall in center, and Foxx moved him home with a single to left that cut the Nats' lead to 2 to 1.

In the seventh, with two out, the Nats got a cheap start on an unexpected run. Tabor fumbled Walker's slow roller and threw it wild past Foxx, with Walker reaching second. Zeke Bonura fetched him home with a single to right center and the Nats had a 3-to-1 lead.

Leonard, who had been pitching three-hit ball to that point, pitched two doubles to the Red Sox in the seventh and his lead was cut to 3 to 2. Tabor led off with a double against the wall in left and Cronin scored him with a double into the leftfield corner. But after Desautel's sacrifice moved Cronin to third with one out, Leonard made a chump out of Rookie Stan Spencer, who was sent in as a pinch hitter and struck him out. Doerr grounded out and Cronin languished on third.

You know about the ninth and tenth innings, but we forgot to state that this was Leonard's ninth victory of the season.

Postscripts . . .

Boston, June 28.—The best ball player on the Washington club for the past week has been Charley Gelbert, who now has a stranglehold on the regular shortstop job . . . His sure fielding and rifle arm has been a great source of comfort to Bucky Harris and he is beginning to justify his reputation as a dangerous hitter with men on base . . . Young Jimmy Pofahl and any other Nat with shortstop ambitions will be warming the bench for a long time, barring injury to Gelbert . . . Buddy Myer was the recipient of a dirty look from all of the Red Sox in the ninth inning today when he managed to collide with Bobby Doerr, who was covering first base on Myer's bunt . . . Doerr fell heavily to the ground but held the ball, and the Boston fans roundly booed Myer as he made his way back to the bench . . . They used to cheer him when he was the best third baseman in the league while at Boston years ago . . . Gerald Walker's charmed life on the bases is phenomenal . . . He draws more wild throws than any other four players in the league . . . George Case was tossed out of the game by Third Base Umpire Eddie Rommel after throwing all the bats in the Washington dugout on to the field . . . Case was protesting at third strike called by Umpire George Moriarty, claiming he had fouled the ball . . . Case's banishment was a break for Leonard inasmuch as in the ninth inning substitute Sammy West went back toward the wall for a line drive by Cramer which Case may not have handled . . . Rick Ferrell was dropping at least half the knuckle-ball pitches thrown by Leonard today . . . He took several nasty bumps on the arms and hands from the butterfly ball . . . Joe Cronin put it strictly to himself when he ordered the tying run sacrificed to second in the ninth inning . . . Then he delivered a stinging double to left that scored it . . . The Nats have now won five of their last seven games . . . A fair sort of rebound for a club that had lost seven straight . . . Tomorrow it will probably be Hudson pitching against Jack Wilson of the Red Sox.—POVICH.

St. Paul Sells Anton To Memphis Club

St. Paul, June 28 (AP).—The St. Paul American Association Baseball Club sold Leroy Anton, first sacker, to Memphis today and he will report to the Southern Association club Sunday night.

Anton has been with St. Paul for two seasons, hitting .290 in 1938 and dropping to .264 last season. This season he had trouble getting under way and a slight injury kept him out of the line-up for a time. His batting mark this year is .234.

also rapped in hole-winning putts up to 20 feet. The Swarthmore star was down only once during the day, to Alexander, but he wiped out the southerner's two-hole margin by birdieing the ninth and tenth holes. After regaining the advantage with winning threes on the eleventh and twelfth he remained in front.

Brooke was even par for his 16 holes against Middlecoff, who found himself 3 down at the turn, but the Cavalier's game tapered off a bit during the afternoon. He trailed Foy by a stroke when the football-playing Crusader got a birdie deuce with a 5-footer on the 190-yard sixth. Brooke won the seventh and eighth to go 1-up before both rounded the turn with 37s, and he also outstroked his rival on the thirteenth.

Clark Beaten

Foy qualified for the semifinals by defeating Bill Clark, of Dartmouth, 4 and 2, and in the other third-rounder Cordingly outplayed Bill Hall, of Iowa State, a semifinalist at Des Moines last year for a 2 and 1 victory.

Brooke, known to his intercollegiate rivals as "the Virginia Creeper" because of his deliberate and cautious play, hails from Birmingham, Ala., and is captain-elect of the Virginia team. Now 20, he has been playing golf for the past 13 years and his previous outstanding performance was making the 1937 Alabama State amateur's semifinals.

Haverstick, 21 and a golfer of ten years' standing, graduated recently. He comes from Lancaster, Pa., and his most recent success was qualifying for the 1940 National Open with a 73-75, 148 in his sectional tryouts.

To Charley Gelbert, 12 points, because he drove in three of the Nats four runs with his two doubles and a single, including the winning run in the tenth.

To Cecil Travis, 7 points, because he made three hits and scored two of the Nats' four runs including the winning run, and because he played a clever game in the field.

To Zeke Bonura, 3 points because he singled to drive home a run in the seventh with two out.

To Buddy Lewis, 3 points because he doubled and singled and made a pair of clever catches in rightfield. The totals:

score card gave to Brown by a point, and the slow fourth, hwich was called all even. Overlin won the remainder by decisive margins.

There were no knockdowns, but Overlin had the taller Brown all but out on his feet in the tenth. Brown's face was covered with blood and he was a very tired youngster although he kept his head and managed to hang on to the end.

The bout was the feature of Richmond's annual police show, but was moved up to third place on the six-event program when rain threatened.

The usually polished Overlin was so eager for a knockout that he was off balance several times, but recovered so quickly that Brown was unable to capitalize on the lapses. Overlin, who held two decisions over Brown and also had fought him to two draws, was so confident that he could down the 22-year-old Atlantan that he reversed his hit-and-run style, which won him the title and kept moving forward in a surprisingly aggressive fashion.

Blood streamed from Brown's lips in the first round when Overlin waded in to show that he meant business. Overlin rocked Brown with terrific lefts and rights to the body in the second and continued to deal out two-fisted punishment in the third.

Brown rallied a bit in the fourth and clipped Overlin with three or four lefts which hurt, and had Chris Dundee, Overlin's manager, complaining that the timer let the round go overtime.

Brown got in the only good punch of the fifth round, a right to the jaw, and Overlin danced about waiting for an opening. Overlin kept wading in in the sixth but was unable to land a telling blow. Overlin hurt Brown with hard smashes to the body and side of the head in the seventh, while Brown's only good punch caught Overlin beside his left eye.

16 Vessels Sail To Bring Home U. S. War Refugees

New York, June 28 (AP).—Big liners and little freighters, 16 in all, last night were on the high seas or steaming up for voyages which will end with the homecoming of nearly 4,000 Americans trapped by the spread of Europe's war. The Washington sailed today for Galway, Ireland, to bring home between 1,500 and 2,000 Americans collected there.

Her sister ship, the Manhattan, also has been ordered to make another repatriation voyage and will sail Monday for Lisbon, Portugal, to pick up 1,200 or more Americans.

Meanwhile, 70 Americans sailed yesterday from Bilbao, Spain, on two unidentified merchant ships and 70 more were to board two others preparing to sail from there.

At Lisbon, Portugal, several hundred nationals waited to book passage on the Greek liner Nea Hellas, to sail for New York late next week.

The Excalibur was to sail from Naples with 200 passengers today. The Examiner left Seville June 20 with 15 to 20 pasengers. The Exminster, also with 15 to 20 passengers, left Gibraltar yesterday.

Still in the Mediterranean, due here the second week in July, were the Exchange, Exermont, Exford, Exmouth and Exmoor, each with 15 to 20 passengers.

Hongkong Strife Looms; U. S. May Evacuate Citizens

Young Atlantan Is Victim of Fierce Attack at Richmond

Hongkong (Saturday), June 29 (AP).—United States authorities, apprehensive at indications of possible trouble between Japan and Great Britain in this crown colony, were expected to decide today whether to remove 1,000 Americans from Hongkong.

British instructions from London indicating pending removal of women and children from the Far Eastern British outpost were taken in some quarters to mean that Britain had decided to reject Japan's demand for the closing of the Burma route, over which Japan charges China has been receiving arms.

British authorities disclosed that ships were being held in readiness to take the women and children from the city.

United States officials were said to have asked the State Department in Washington for permission to hold the United States liner President Coolidge until further notice. She is due today from San Francisco en route to Manila. Two United States gunboats also are in this section.

Two Sentenced For Life in Sirkis Holdup Slaying

Lathan Daniel, 23, and John D. Butler, 27, colored holdup men, were sentenced to life imprisonment by Justice F. Dickinson Letts in the District Court yesterday for killing Herman Sirkis, 42, in the robbery of his liquor store February 26.

Justice Letts sentenced Daniel to serve 24 to 72 years in prison for 12 other robberies, to which he pleaded guilty. Butler was sentenced to serve 22 to 66 years for 11 other robberies.

Eddie William, colored, a crony of the bandit pair who escaped from a Georgia institution where he was serving life, was sentenced to 14 to 42 years in prison for 12 robberies in which he joined Daniel and Butler. He was not in the holdup in which Sirkis was killed.

Fairfax Sheriff, 61, Foils Felon By a Tackle

Eppa Kirby, 61-year-old, 190-pound sheriff of Fairfax County, Va., a football star in his college days, stopped a jail break with a flying tackle yesterday, but suffered a severe knife wound in the throat before the fleeing murder convict was subdued.

The break attempt was made at 2:30 p. m. while Kirby was supervising janitors cleaning out a cell in the basement of the jail at Fairfax.

The cell was occupied by John Jackson, 29, colored, awaiting transfer to Richmond to serve a life sentence on conviction last April of the murder of his wife, and Sam Hogan, 20, colored, who is to be tried for the April murder of Stanley Webley, 32, of Sterling, Va.

Kirby was standing in the doorway when Jackson made a sudden dash for the jail yard, almost knocking the sheriff down on his way out. Kirby caught the convict with a leaping tackle just as he was leaving the jail porch. Sheriff and prisoner rolled to the ground, the convict lashing out with a pocketknife with a 2-inch blade.

A 2-inch gash was inflicted on Kirby's throat before he said, the convict could be disarmed by the jail cook, Ernest Rucker, colored, who came to the sheriff's assistance. After Jackson had been locked up again, Kirby walked to the courthouse, where he was treated by the county health officer, Dr. G. R. Carpenter.

Dr. Carpenter said the throat wound was not deep enough to be serious. He also treated the sheriff for a severely bruised right arm.

Hogan, a resident of Herndon, made not attempt to escape during the scuffle. Commonwealth's Attorney Paul E. Brown said he would ask the September term of the county grand jury to indict Jackson on charges of felonious assault and attempted jail break.

Brown said that under the Virginia law, which makes a life term the equivalent of a 30 year sentence, Jackson would have been eligible for parole in three years for release on good behavior after 15 years.

Kirby, a star on the William and Mary College football teams of the early 1900's, said he supposed the knife was secretly handed to Jackson by a visitor.

Listen! with Slocum

Take it from Lew Lehr, being the Nation's No. 1 Nitwit is hard work. To keep abreast of his schedule, which includes editing motion picture shorts, cutting travelogues, "voicing" the sound track for his "Newsettes," and rehearsing and appearing in his C. B. S radio show, Lew has to put in 18 hours two days a week and from 10 to 12 hours a day the rest of the week . . . Charlotte Manson, star of C. B. S.' "Society Girl," went on a tour of the Columbia studios recently. She had never seen any studios except the one she works in. She found sightseeing so interesting that she plans to take a trip to the Statue of Liberty and the Empire State Building observation tower soon . . . The smallest band which Columbia's "Hit Parade" maestro, Mark Warnow, ever led was a three-piece ferryboat band, the largest a 600-piece combined band which he conducted recently at New Rochelle, N. Y. The assignment that gave him the biggest thrill came June 24—when he wielded the baton for the New York Philharmonic . . . While Columbia's "Wings Over Jordan" choir was on tour through New Jersey this week, the choristers made a flying trip to New York Wednesday, June 26, to give a concert at the World's Fair and a special recital for the New York press . . . Penny Singleton, known to the radio and movie public as "Blondie," may step out of character soon for one appearance in a musical comedy. Penny was known on the stage as Dorothy McNulty, star of the musical comedy, "Good News," before going to Hollywood.

Grin and Bear It — By Lichty

"Well, yes . . . Cadwell makes a brilliant after-dinner speech . . . but you should hear him before breakfast . . ."

The Culbertson organization puts out a monthly quiz, called "What Do You Know?" to keep their followers' bidding and play up to date and trim. Here are two playing problems. See what you can do with them.

Special Hands

West opened the bidding with three hearts, North and East passed; South closed the auction with a bid of four spades. West opened the king of hearts. Clew: East holds the diamond king; from here on you're on your own. Answer at the foot of the column.

South is declarer at three no trump. West opens the spade six; East goes up with the ace and returns the nine. Declarer covers with the Jack and his contract is home. Could the contract be defeated by any other line of defense?

Answers to Questions

(1) Did you go up with the heart ace? If you did you could not fulfill the contract. East is void in hearts and will ruff your ace. After that you still must lose a heart and two diamonds. The safest play is duck the heart king and also the heart continuation. Ruff the third round of hearts, draw trumps, and discard one of the diamond losers on the heart ace.

(2) Yes, the contract can be defeated if East plays the spade nine on the first trick and not the ace. If declarer wins, West must get in with the heart ace, and a small spade to East's ace will allow the latter to return the spade three through declarer's tenace. If declarer refuses the first spade trick, East will follow with the ace and a small one. West will win with the king and clear the suit before his heart ace is taken away.
